11 persons hurt in area traffic

Eleven persons were injured — six seriously — in the three area traffic accidents Friday and Saturday, according to the highway patrol.

In a single- vehicle accident at 12:45 a.m. Saturday on Route D one mile north of Wappapello, the driver of a station wagon, Merle Eugene Webster, 19, of Austin, Pa., and five passengers were seriously injured and two other passengers received minor injuries.

According to the patrol, the station wagon ran off the road on a curve and struck a tree.

Webster was taken to Veterans Hospital in Poplar Bluff. Passengers who were seriously injured included Kindle Jameson, 21, and Danny Jameson, 26, of Ellsinore and Donna Burpo, 15, Daniel Burpo, 11, and Debbie Nicholson, 24, of Wappapello. Richard Eagleton, 26, of Wappapello and Howard Rains, 23, of Poplar Bluff received minor injuries.

All of the injured passengers were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff, except that Kindle James was taken to Poplar Bluff Hospital and the hospital where Danny Jameson was admitted was not listed on the report.

A two- car collision at 3:30 p.m. Saturday, two miles south of Poplar Bluff on Highway 53, caused minor injuries to two persons.

The accident occurred when a northbound car driven by Abraham Lincoln Faughn, 57, of Poplar Bluff Route Four struck the back of a car driven by Donna Sue Butler, 26, of Poplar Bluff when she backed her car from a driveway onto the highway in front of the Faughn car.

The Butler woman and Mary Faughn, 54, of Poplar Bluff Route Four, a passenger in the Faughn car, were treated and released at doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

A Fredericktown man received minor injuries in a car- truck accident at 10:25 p.m. Friday two miles south of Fredericktown on Highway 67 in Madison County.

The highway patrol said a pickup truck driven south by Marion Janell Goodwin, 35, of St. Louis crossed the centerline and sideswiped a car driven north by James Lee Young, 28, of Iron Mountain.

A passenger in the Young car, Roger Lee Siebe, 28, of Fredericktown, was taken to Madison County Memorial Hospital in Fredericktown with minor injuries.

House okays revision of campaign law

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A filibuster in the Senate and the House's 11th hour approval of a bill revising the Campaign Finance and Disclosure law marked the end of the 1976 regular session of the Missouri Legislature Friday night.

In the final hours of the four-month session, bills sent to the desk of Gov. Christopher S. Bond included those establishing a tax study commission, revising the state's billboard law and changing malpractice insurance statutes in an effort to reduce insurance premiums.

Moments before midnight when the four-month session was scheduled to end, the House approved a bill which exempts minor candidates from the economic disclosure provisions of the campaign law, and weakens the provisions for other candidates.

If Bond signs it, and he's laready given indications he won't, it would go into effect 10 days after the Aug. 3 primary election. Friday night was not the first time that the campaign law has occupied the last night of the legislature.

It was in dispute during the final moments of the 1974 session, when the legislature failed to approve it, and it ended up being approved in a statewide referendum later in the year.

But while the House was approving the campaign law change, Republicans Paul Bradshaw of Springfield and Richard Webster of Carthage were wokring to defeat a federal compliance bill which required the state to set up an agency within the Department of Social Services to track down runaway fathers and force them to pay child support payments.

The federal government has called on Missouri to approve such a law under the threat of the loss of $4.5 million in Aid to Dependent Children payments to the state.

Bradshaw and Webster conducted an hour's dialogue in the Senate at the end of the session, killing the federal compliance law along with several other measures.

After the defeat, Bond said that he recognized the federal government had severe penalites for those states which do not comply with the runaway fathers law.

"The legislature made a conscious decision not to go along with the federal requirements," Bond said. "Although I feel it may not have been so wise not to pass it, on the other hand I share their strong feelings that the federal government should not tell the states how to spend their money."

When the bill first came up for consideration, Sen. Willaim Cason, president pro tem of the Senate, warned that failing to approve it could result in the need for a special sesson just to pass the compliance bill.

Both Cason and House Speaker Richard Rabbitt pointed to the mandatory sentencing for the use of a handgun and passage of a small claims court bill as the highlights of the session.

"It will be a very successful session when people take a look at what we accomplished," Rabbitt, a St. Louis Democrat, said.

Cason, a Democrat from Clinton, said the legislature "paid the bills, which is the main purpose of our short four month session."

In addition to the ADC bill, other measures which died on the last night of the session were a decrease in the amount of life insurance required with credit purchases, a conflict of interest bill and a measure which would have limited the type of testimony admissible in rape cases.

The tax study commission would be made up of 12 members who would study the state's tax laws and make recommendations to improve them. The commission would study all facets of the tax system, including income, corporate, sales and property taxes.

The billboard provision brings the state's laws into compliance with a federal highway beautification regulation which supporters believe will save the state a possible $12 million in threatened loss of federal highway funds.

A package of three malpractice insurance bills received final legislative approval, bringing to six the entire package of meausres which are designed to reduce skyrocketing premiums for medical liability insurance.

The three bills basically tighten the statute of limitations on the amount of time a person may file a malpractice claim, give the Board of Heal-

Also, Riney reported a 10-speed bicycle valued at $99 was taken from the garage.

Mark Carlisle, 1 Peach Tree Lane, reported the theft of a citizens band radio worth $178 and an electrical converter worth $28 from his kitchen. The theft occurred between 5 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Saturday. There was no sign of forced entry, police said.

A radio, six tapes and an instamatic camera were taken from a pickup truck belonging to Charles Springs, 610 Holly Hill Drive, between midnight Friday and 1:30 a.m. Saturday while the truck was parked on the Kingsway Plaza Mall parking lot.

CB radios were taken from a car and pickup truck parked at the William Leonard home, 519 Malcolm St., Thursday night or Friday morning. The thieves made off with two CBs valued at $219 each, two speakers valued at $16 each and a V-mount valued at $16. The total loss was estimated at $485.

Bruce Taylor, 228 Collins Drive, told police that a CB valued at $130 was taken from his car while it was parked at his home between 11:30 p.m. Friday and 6:50 a..m. Saturday.

Someone took two rear wheels and white wall tires off a 1976 automobile in the new c ar lot at Goza-Harper Motor Co., 225 E. Malone Ave., between 5:30 p.m. Thursday and 10 a.m. Friday. The loss was estimated at $200.

Tractor recovered near scene of theft

EAST PRAIRIE — A farm tractor owned by Hugh Lattus that had been stolen early Saturday morning from a farm shed belonging to Bill Maclay at Dorena has been recovered and two suspects apprehended.

Donald Brown, 20, and a juvenile boy, both of East Prairie, are in the Mississippi County jail at Charleston, pending filing of charges.

The sheriff's department was notified at 12:30 a.m. by some people who live near the shed that they had heard some noise and possibly someone was trying to break into the shed.

Deputy Sheriff Norris Grissom went to the vicinity and met the tractor on the road. When he stopped his patrol car, two persons got off the tractor and started running. Grissom said he pursued one of them on foot across a field and had to fire a warning shot in the air before he slowed to a walk and was taken into custody.

Reagan tops Ford in Texas primary

DALLAS (AP) — Ronald Reagan won the Texas presidential primary election Saturday night, defeating President Ford by rolling up a runaway margin in delegate strength in the state he needed to fuel his challenge for the Republican nomination.

Reagan led for 92 Texas votes at the Republican national convention, Ford led for none. Votes had been counted from 24 per cent of the 5,565 Texas precincts.

Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter was the winner in the Democratic primary. With 28 per cent of the vote in, delegates pledged to support his nomination led for 85 national convention seats, those committed to favorite son Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen for only four.

It was Reagan's second presidential primary victory, and it was a crucial one. He had said he could beat Ford in the South and the Southwest, and he had to prove that to keep his White House challenge credible — and financially viable.

Ford has won seven times, in two cases without opposition on the ballot. But the Saturday outcome virtually guarantees that he will have to reckon with Reagan's opposition through the balance of the primary election season, and probably all the way to the Republican convention.

Ford had spent four days campaigning in Texas, right up to election eve, and had said at one point he expected to win. He later backed off that, called himself the underdog, and said he though he had an excellent chance in a state that "certainly will be a headliner."

The headliner's role was Reagan's, although he had shied from victory forecasts, too, in the final phase of the cam-

Stoddard jail escapee captured

BLOOMFIELD — Jackie Prince Phillips, 18, of Puxico, who escaped from the Stoddard County jail sometime between midnight and 4 a.m. on April 22, was taken into custody Saturday morning at Puxico, according to the sheriff's department.

A spokesman for the department said he did not know the details or circumstances leading to the arrest of Phillips.

Phillips, Russell Grubs and Dale Abel escaped together but Grubs and Abel turned themselves over to sheriff's officers within a few hours after their escape.

A lock on a fire door was broken on the second story of the jail, and the three sent down a fire escape and over a fence surrounding the jail.

At the time of the escape Phillips was awaiting transfer to the custody of the State Department of Correction to serve a three- year sentence for tampering with a motor vehicle.

Officer Ronald Sexton, 29, was making a left turn onto Malone Avenue from North New Madrid Street when he was struck by a car driven by Jon Christopher Sharp, 24, of 45 N. Henderson St., Cape Girardeau, who was westbound on Malone.

Police said Sharp told them he was thinking about school and failed to stop for the light.

The police car received damage to the left rear fender and was taken to a body shop for repairs.

No arrest was made, police said.

'Taxi Driver' to SeMo

When a modest-budget film titled "Mean Streets" was released a few years ago, it not only generated a wave of acclaim but sent two careers skyrocketing.

For a young director named Martin Scorsese, it was graduation day from low-budget thrillers and documentaries to major filmmaking. For an equally youthful actor named Robert De Niro, it was a personal triumph, capped by a "Best Actor" Award from the New York Film Critics Circle.

Now, Scorsese and De Niro have been reunited for the Columbia Pictures release, "Taxi Driver," which stars De Niro and Cybill Shepherd

A compelling portrait of a New York cab driver who drifts into a frightening fantasy world, the film was written by Paul Schrader and also stars Peter Boyle, Jodie Foster, Albert Brooks, Harvey Keitel, and Leonard Harris.

"Taxi Driver" is Scorsese's first feature film since his direction of Ellen Burstyn in her Academy Award-winning performance in "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore," one of three Oscar nominations given the film.

It took Martin Scorsese twelve years to migrate from New York's Little Italy to Hollywood. Born in New York in 1942, he originally planned to enter the Roman Catholic priesthood. A rabid film buff, he was attending New York University as an English major when he decided upon a film career and became totally involved in the school's cinema department.

While still an undergraduate, Scorsese produced a number of award-winning short subjects and on the strength of those accomplishments raised enough money to produce and direct a feature, "Who's That Knocking At My Door?" with tyro actor Harvey Keitel.

Scorsese next earned his living as a film editor on such documentary films as "Woodstock," "Medicineball Caravan," and "Elvis." He set out for Hollywood in 1970 and won a job with exploitation film-maker Roger Corman to direct "Boxcar Bertha." His direction of "Mean Streets," then firmly established him among the most promising new directors in films. Just prior to his direction of "Taxi Driver," Scorsese filmed a labor of love, a short documentary on his parents and heritage called "Italianamerican," which became a hit at the 1974 New York Film Festival.

Taxi Driver was last score for composer

"Taxi Driver" was the last motion picture score composed by the late Bernard Herrmann. A classical composer of note, Herrmann began composing and conducting for the screen in 1940 and for his first efforts received two Academy Award nominations in 1941 for the scores of "Citizen Kane" and "All That Money Can Buy" and was awarded the Oscar for the latter. Among his notable screen music credits are "The Magnificent Ambersons," "Jane Eyre," "Hangover Square," "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir," "Anna and the King of Siam," for which he again was nominated for the Oscar, "The Snows of Kilimanjaro," "Journey to the Center of the Earth," and "The 7th Voyage of Sinbad."

In a lengthy association with Alfred Hitchcok, Herrmann composed the music for such hits as "The Trouble With Harry," "The Man Who Knew Too Much," "North by Northwest," "Psycho" and "Marnie." He also contributed the music for Francois Truffaut's "Fahrenheit 451" and "The Bride Wore Black," and most recently for "The Twisted Nerve," "Sisters," "Obsession," and had completed the score for "It's Alive" just prior to the music for "Taxi Driver."

Among Herrmann's major compositions were cantatas, a symphony, "Moby Dick"; an opera, "Wuthering Heights," and the music for a number of television specials, among them the 1954 CBS-TV musical version of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" with the late Fredric March and Basil Rathbone.

Eleven persons were injured — six seriously — in the three area traffic accidents Friday and Saturday, according to the highway patrol.

In a single- vehicle accident at 12:45 a.m. Saturday on Route D one mile north of Wappapello, the driver of a station wagon, Merle Eugene Webster, 19, of Austin, Pa., and five passengers were seriously injured and two other passengers received minor injuries.

According to the patrol, the station wagon ran off the road on a curve and struck a tree.

Richard Eagleton, 26, of Wappapello and Howard Rains, 23, of Poplar Bluff received minor injuries.

All of the injured passengers were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff, except that Kindle James was taken to Poplar Bluff Hospital and the hospital where Danny Jameson was admitted was not listed on the report.

A two- car collision at 3:30 p.m. Saturday, two miles south of Poplar Bluff on Highway 53, caused minor injuries to two persons.

The accident occurred when a northbound car driven by Abraham Lincoln Faughn, 57, of Poplar Bluff Route Four struck the back of a car driven by Donna Sue Butler, 26, of Poplar Bluff when she backed her car from a driveway onto the highway in front of the Faughn car.

The Butler woman and Mary Faughn, 54, of Poplar Bluff Route Four, a passenger in the Faughn car, were treated and released at doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

A Fredericktown man received minor injuries in a car- truck accident at 10:25 p.m. Friday two miles south of Fredericktown on Highway 67 in Madison County.

The highway patrol said a pickup truck driven south by Marion Janell Goodwin, 35, of St. Louis crossed the centerline and sideswiped a car driven north by James Lee Young, 28, of Iron Mountain.

A passenger in the Young car, Roger Lee Siebe, 28, of Fredericktown, was taken to Madison County Memorial Hospital in Fredericktown with minor injuries.

House okays revision of campaign law

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A filibuster in the Senate and the House's 11th hour approval of a bill revising the Campaign Finance and Disclosure law marked the end of the 1976 regular session of the Missouri Legislature Friday night.

In the final hours of the four-month session, bills sent to the desk of Gov. Christopher S. Bond included those establishing a tax study commission, revising the state's billboard law and changing malpractice insurance statutes in an effort to reduce insurance premiums.

Moments before midnight when the four-month session was scheduled to end, the House approved a bill which exempts minor candidates from the economic disclosure provisions of the campaign law, and weakens the provisions for other candidates.

If Bond signs it, and he's laready given indications he won't, it would go into effect 10 days after the Aug. 3 primary election. Friday night was not the first time that the campaign law has occupied the last night of the legislature.

It was in dispute during the final moments of the 1974 session, when the legislature failed to approve it, and it ended up being approved in a statewide referendum later in the year.

But while the House was approving the campaign law change, Republicans Paul Bradshaw of Springfield and Richard Webster of Carthage were wokring to defeat a federal compliance bill which required the state to set up an agency within the Department of Social Services to track down runaway fathers and force them to pay child support payments.

The federal government has called on Missouri to approve such a law under the threat of the loss of $4.5 million in Aid to Dependent Children payments to the state.

Bradshaw and Webster conducted an hour's dialogue in the Senate at the end of the session, killing the federal compliance law along with several other measures.

After the defeat, Bond said that he recognized the federal government had severe penalites for those states which do not comply with the runaway fathers law.

"The legislature made a conscious decision not to go along with the federal requirements," Bond said. "Although I feel it may not have been so wise not to pass it, on the other hand I share their strong feelings that the federal government should not tell the states how to spend their money."

When the bill first came up for consideration, Sen. Willaim Cason, president pro tem of the Senate, warned that failing to approve it could result in the need for a special sesson just to pass the compliance bill.

Both Cason and House Speaker Richard Rabbitt pointed to the mandatory sentencing for the use of a handgun and passage of a small claims court bill as the highlights of the session.

"It will be a very successful session when people take a look at what we accomplished," Rabbitt, a St. Louis Democrat, said.

Cason, a Democrat from Clinton, said the legislature "paid the bills, which is the main purpose of our short four month session."

In addition to the ADC bill, other measures which died on the last night of the session were a decrease in the amount of life insurance required with credit purchases, a conflict of interest bill and a measure which would have limited the type of testimony admissible in rape cases.

The tax study commission would be made up of 12 members who would study the state's tax laws and make recommendations to improve them. The commission would study all facets of the tax system, including income, corporate, sales and property taxes.

The billboard provision brings the state's laws into compliance with a federal highway beautification regulation which supporters believe will save the state a possible $12 million in threatened loss of federal highway funds.

A package of three malpractice insurance bills received final legislative approval, bringing to six the entire package of meausres which are designed to reduce skyrocketing premiums for medical liability insurance.

The three bills basically tighten the statute of limitations on the amount of time a person may file a malpractice claim, give the Board of Heal-

Also, Riney reported a 10-speed bicycle valued at $99 was taken from the garage.

Mark Carlisle, 1 Peach Tree Lane, reported the theft of a citizens band radio worth $178 and an electrical converter worth $28 from his kitchen. The theft occurred between 5 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Saturday. There was no sign of forced entry, police said.

A radio, six tapes and an instamatic camera were taken from a pickup truck belonging to Charles Springs, 610 Holly Hill Drive, between midnight Friday and 1:30 a.m. Saturday while the truck was parked on the Kingsway Plaza Mall parking lot.

CB radios were taken from a car and pickup truck parked at the William Leonard home, 519 Malcolm St., Thursday night or Friday morning. The thieves made off with two CBs valued at $219 each, two speakers valued at $16 each and a V-mount valued at $16. The total loss was estimated at $485.

Bruce Taylor, 228 Collins Drive, told police that a CB valued at $130 was taken from his car while it was parked at his home between 11:30 p.m. Friday and 6:50 a..m. Saturday.

Someone took two rear wheels and white wall tires off a 1976 automobile in the new c ar lot at Goza-Harper Motor Co., 225 E. Malone Ave., between 5:30 p.m. Thursday and 10 a.m. Friday. The loss was estimated at $200.

Tractor recovered near scene of theft

EAST PRAIRIE — A farm tractor owned by Hugh Lattus that had been stolen early Saturday morning from a farm shed belonging to Bill Maclay at Dorena has been recovered and two suspects apprehended.

Donald Brown, 20, and a juvenile boy, both of East Prairie, are in the Mississippi County jail at Charleston, pending filing of charges.

The sheriff's department was notified at 12:30 a.m. by some people who live near the shed that they had heard some noise and possibly someone was trying to break into the shed.

Deputy Sheriff Norris Grissom went to the vicinity and met the tractor on the road. When he stopped his patrol car, two persons got off the tractor and started running. Grissom said he pursued one of them on foot across a field and had to fire a warning shot in the air before he slowed to a walk and was taken into custody.

Reagan tops Ford in Texas primary

DALLAS (AP) — Ronald Reagan won the Texas presidential primary election Saturday night, defeating President Ford by rolling up a runaway margin in delegate strength in the state he needed to fuel his challenge for the Republican nomination.

Reagan led for 92 Texas votes at the Republican national convention, Ford led for none. Votes had been counted from 24 per cent of the 5,565 Texas precincts.

Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter was the winner in the Democratic primary. With 28 per cent of the vote in, delegates pledged to support his nomination led for 85 national convention seats, those committed to favorite son Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen for only four.

It was Reagan's second presidential primary victory, and it was a crucial one. He had said he could beat Ford in the South and the Southwest, and he had to prove that to keep his White House challenge credible — and financially viable.

Ford has won seven times, in two cases without opposition on the ballot. But the Saturday outcome virtually guarantees that he will have to reckon with Reagan's opposition through the balance of the primary election season, and probably all the way to the Republican convention.

Ford had spent four days campaigning in Texas, right up to election eve, and had said at one point he expected to win. He later backed off that, called himself the underdog, and said he though he had an excellent chance in a state that "certainly will be a headliner."

The headliner's role was Reagan's, although he had shied from victory forecasts, too, in the final phase of the cam-

Stoddard jail escapee captured

BLOOMFIELD — Jackie Prince Phillips, 18, of Puxico, who escaped from the Stoddard County jail sometime between midnight and 4 a.m. on April 22, was taken into custody Saturday morning at Puxico, according to the sheriff's department.

A spokesman for the department said he did not know the details or circumstances leading to the arrest of Phillips.

Phillips, Russell Grubs and Dale Abel escaped together but Grubs and Abel turned themselves over to sheriff's officers within a few hours after their escape.

A lock on a fire door was broken on the second story of the jail, and the three sent down a fire escape and over a fence surrounding the jail.

At the time of the escape Phillips was awaiting transfer to the custody of the State Department of Correction to serve a three- year sentence for tampering with a motor vehicle.

Policeman slightly hurt in collision

A city police car was damaged and the officer driving it received minor injuries in a two-car accident at 1:30 p.m. Friday at the intersection of Malone Avenue and New Madrid Street.

Officer Ronald Sexton, 29, was making a left turn onto Malone Avenue from North New Madrid Street when he was struck by a car driven by Jon Christopher Sharp, 24, of 45 N. Henderson St., Cape Girardeau, who was westbound on Malone.

Police said Sharp told them he was thinking about school and failed to stop for the light.

Sexton complained of a sore back after the accident, police said. Police said they do not know if the officer sought medical treatment.

The police car received damage to the left rear fender and was taken to a body shop for repairs.

No arrest was made, police said.

Meeting set on water pollution control plan

The Missouri Department of Natural Resources will hold an informational meeting on a proposed plan to control water pollution in southeast Missouri at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Ramada Inn, Highway 62 East.

The plan examines water pollution sources and problems in the Lower Mississippi River basin, which is the area that drains to the St. Francis River, the Little River drainage ditches and the St. John Bayou. This is roughly the area including Dunklin, Pemiscot, New Madrid, Mississippi, Scott, Stoddard, Wayne and Madison counties and the eastern half of Iron County, the southern half of St. Francois County, the southern tips of Bollinger and Cape Girardeau counties and the eastern border of Butler County.

The meeting is being held to answer questions and hear comments on the plan, says James P. Odendahl, director of staff of the Department of Natural Resources water quality program.

All interested persons are encouraged to attend the meeting or to submit written statements to the Department of Natural Resources, Division of Environmental Quality, P.O. Box 1368, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Bold Forbes wins derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Bold Forbes, the spunky little horse from Puerto Rico, smashed Honest Pleasure's balloon Saturday afternoon by defeating what some had called a super horse in a wire to wire victory in the Kentucky Derby.

Flying the red and black colors of Esteban Tizol, Bold Forbes opened a wide lead in the backstretch and hung on as Honest Pleasure made a gallant stretch drive.

Elocutionist, Eugene Cashman's Arkansas derby winner, finished third and Amano, owned by James Irvin, finished fourth.

It was Bold Forbes on the inside and Honest Pleasure on the outside, only a length apart, as they charged down the stretch through the green haze of a smoke bomb thrown on the track just after the race started.

Bold Forbes' victory made it three Derbies in a row for grandsons of the late, great sire Bold Ruler.

At the wire, Bold Forbes had a one-length lead over Honest Pleasure with Elocutionist another 3¼ lengths back and a gap of another 1¼ back to Amano.

It was, truly, "the greatest day of my life," for Tizol, who felt that way even before his horse won America's greatest horse race.

Tizol, 72, however, not only could not be at the Derby because of a recent stroke but was ordered not to watch it on television or watch it on the radio.

It was the greatest of victories for a colt whose owners once thought might never race at all.

Enrique Ubarri, one of Tizol's neighbors, who gets his horses ready for the races, said Bold Forbes was "one of the most backward" yearlings sent to his farm two years ago.

"He showed no signs of speed and did not seem to like racing," Ubarri said.

He simply had his owners—and everyone else—fooled.

In his first start, he was a 35-1 shot and neither the owner, the trainer nor the jockey bet any money on him.

He won by 17 lengths. And he scored by much lesser odds in seven of his eight races as a 2-year-old.

His time in the Derby was 2:013-5 for the 1¼ miles, and he returned $8, $2.40 and $2.60. The Derby record of 1:592-5 was set by Secretariat in 1973. The 102nd Derby, worth $165,-200 to the winner, was raced over a fast track, but under threatening skies. The showers and thundershowers that were forcast didn't make it to Louisville by post time.

Honest Pleasure, sent off as the first odds-on favorite in the Derby since Native Dancer in 1953, paid $2.40 and $2.20 when he finished second—just like Native Dancer. Elocutionist paid $2.60.

Behind Amano at the wire, in order, were On The Sly, Cojak, Inca Roca, Play The Red and Bidson.

Bold Forbes was bred in Kentucky, but immediately taken to Puerto Rico after Tizol purchased him as a yearling for $15,200 at a Fasig-Tipton sale in Lexington.

He was scheduled at first to do all his racing in Puerto Rico, but after he won five in a row, Tizol sent him to the United States and put trainer Laz Barrera in charge of him when Tizol's regular trainer, Bernardo Mongil, suffered a mild stroke and preferred to stay at home.

Bold Forbes suffered only a mild setback in his racing campaign when it was discovered last winter in Californina that he loafed when he held the lead. An inventive set of blinkers with holes in the sides of the eyecups solved the problem. And he now has won four straight.

Assistant trainer John Nazareth said the strategy "was to lay off the pace, but not quite that much. He (Bold Forbes) opened up about three lengths and two would have been enough.

Jockey Angel Cordero Jr. said, "I give credit to both horses. I want to thank Mr. Tizol for giving me this opportunity to put Puerto Rico one more time a little higher."

The crowd of more than 100,-000 watched as Cordero, in the way he knows best—by winning—thanked Tizol, the man who gave him his start in racing 15 years ago at El Commandante in San Juan.

Jockey Braulio Baeza said Honest Pleasure "hesitated a little bit" when he saw the last dregs of the smoke. National guardsmen raked the smoke bomb to the outer edge of the track almost instantly after it was thrown, but the green haze hung on until after the race was over.

Baeza said Honest Pleasure "tried hard but didn't have it. I felt that Bold Forbes was slowing down in the stretch, but the little horse kept on running. It surprised me that he was so game at the end."

Bold Forbes opened a five-length lead after the first half-mile and was on top by three after six furlongs. At the head of the stretch, he led by one-half length and widened it in the final strides to a full length.

His start to finish victory is the first since Riva Ridge did it in 1972.

Honest Pleasure raced second throughout the 1¼ miles with Elocutionist and Amano sharing the third and fourth positions the entire distance.

The victory, Bold Forbes' 11th in 14 career starts, increases his career bankroll to $366,639.

Elocutionist's rider, J.L. Lively, said he had "a clear shot turning for home. He made a good move. He gave me all he had but it wasn't enough."

Honest Pleasure won last year's juvenile championship with six victories in eight starts, including four important stakes races last fall. This year, he had been undefeated in four races, including the Flamingo, the Florida Derby and the Blue Grass Stakes.

Baeza disappointed after loss in Derby

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "The little horse was just too game—I couldn't catch him," a somber and disappointed Braulio Baeza said Saturday after failing to guide odds-on favorite Honest Pleasure to victory in the 102nd Kentucky Derby.

The little horse was Bold Forbes, a dark bay cannonball that burst to the front and staved off Honest Pleasure's strongest challenge to win by a length.

Baeza, the country's top jockey in 1975, refused to blame his pre-game put-down by trainer LeRoy Jolley for his disappointing failure.

"I rode the horse—he didn't," the 36-year-old Panamanian said. "I followed his instructions.

"He told me to lay back in second or third during the early part of the race. I did just what he told me. But when I made my move turning into the stretch the little horse kept going.

"He surprised me. He is a gutty little horse."

An apparent freeze in relations between jockey and trainer of the Derby favorite surfaced 48 hours before the race when Jolley erased Baeza's name as rider in entering Honest Pleasure Thursday and wrote "no boy."

The act created considerable confusion before Jolley, after being pressured by Churchill Downs officials, announced Baeza as the rider.

Both Jolley and the horse's owner, Bertram Firestone, shrugged off the incident as an "oversight." Track insiders said the misunderstanding ran deeper than that.

There were reports that Baeza, who had ridden the colt to eight victories, might be replaced in the saddle for the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes, the remaining two jewels of racing's Triple Crown for 3-year-olds.

But Jolley said after the race: "Baeza raced a perfect race. I have no complaints."

Asked if he wanted another shot at Bold Forbes, Baeza shrugged his shoulders.

"I guess so."

Asked if he expected to continue riding Honest Pleasure in the remaining major events, the impassive Panamanian again showed little emotion: "Who knows?"

"I listen to what he says but I do not always do it," Baeza said. "I am on the horse. I must react to what develops."

White Sox beat Tigers

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Jason Thompson slugged a two-run double and his first major league home run and Vern Ruhle pitched a five-hitter to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 10-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox Saturday.

Thompson, a 21-year-old first baseman who came up from the minor leagues a week ago, doubled off loser Bart Johnson after Willie Horton and Rusty Staub had walked with two out in the first inning.

The Tigers piled up a 7-0 lead before Thompson hit his homer in the seventh. He also singled in the eighth. Staub, Alex Johnson and Ron LeFlore each chipped in with two hits and LeFlore also stole four bases.

Ruhle, gaining his first decision of the season, didn't allow more than one baserunner in any inning until the seventh when Jim Spencer walked with two out and Bucky Dent singled before Jack Brohamer grounded out to end the inning. A one-out homer by Jorge Orta in the ninth spoiled Ruhle's shutout.

In the eighth, Horton hit his sixth homer of the year.

Bench hits 3rd homer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Homers by Dan Driessen and Johnny Bench, his third in two days, and the eight-strikeout pitching of Don Gullett gave the Cincinnati Reds a 6-1 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday night.

Gullett, 2-0, with both victories over Montreal, gave up a home run to Pete Mackanin and two hits to Bombo Rivera before being lifted in the eighth inning. Pat Zachary pitched the ninth for the Reds.

Cincinnati broke the game open with three runs in each the fourth and fifth innings, chasing loser Don Carrithers, 1-2.

Carrithers held Cincinnati hitless for three innings, then Dan Driessen hit his first homer of the season to open the fourth.

Carrithers struck out Bench, then gave up doubles to Mike Lum and George Foster for the second run of the inning. Gullett, helping his own cause, lined a single through the box to score Foster and the Reds went ahead 3-0.

Mackanin blasted his homer in the fifth, his second of the year and the first run given up by Gullett this season.

Bench then clouted a three-run homer in the fifth, chasing Carrithers.

Roundtree will wear black and gold again- this time for Mizzou

By CHARLIE FRANCIS

University of Missouri basketball coach Norm Stewart has gone once again to the talent pool known as Southeast Missouri in search of a future prospect for his powerful Tiger basketball program.

The University announced Friday that Kennett Indian star Robert Roundtree has decided to enroll at the University this fall on a basketball scholarship.

Roundtree, contacted by phone Friday at his Kennett home, said that he told Stewart of his decision to attend MU this week after visiting the University campus earlier in the week. A formal letter-of- intent is expected to be signed within the next two weeks.

"I went up to talk to coach Stewart Sunday," said the 6-3, 185-pound athlete. "He looked at me for awhile to see what I could do, then showed me around."

Roundtree has been a unanimous choice for Semo All-Conference honors each of the past three years, along with being tabbed for All-District 3-A honors as well.

Despite his 21.4 points-per-game scoring average this past season, which was tops in the conference, the senior was snubbed when it came time for All-State balloting, having to settle for honorable mention of both the coaches' and writers' squads.

But Kennett coach Terry Turlington doesn't think the fact that his star didn't make All-State is important. "That thing at Columbia (the All-State meeting) every year is a circus," said the outgoing Indian coach, who also coached MU great Don Tomlinson at Kennett. "I definitely think Robert was the best ballplayer in Southeast Missouri this year.

Turlington is familiar with the MU cage program, having been a part of it for four years, from 1958-62, and noted that Norm Stewart must know what he is doing. "You can't have a program like theirs without good recruiting," said Turlington. "Stewart thinks he can play ball. It doesn't really matter what the other coaches and the sportswriters think."

Roundtree's career rebounding average of 14.5 per game shattered Tomlinson's old mark of 12.9 for the Kennett school. His single-game high of 43 points this season against Caruthersville also broke an Indian record held by Tomlinson.

Indications are that Roundtree will be used as a swing guard, meaning that he won't be handling the ball as much as the other guard. "He'll probably be given the chance to post his man," said Turlington.

Roundtree himself is expecting to play a season of basketball on the MU freshman team, helping the slender senior to make the transition from frontline to guard. He played forward his first two seasons at Kennett, then played some center this year. "I'm mostly going to have to improve my ballhandling and my shooting," noted the articulate Roundtree, who says he presently feels uncomforable shooting from outside of 15 feet. "I'll have to work on my defense, too."

But Roundtree, who has put about ten pounds onto his 6-3 frame since the season ended, has hopes of possibly playing some varsity ball next season, if he can make the transition soon enough. Only two players (Willie Smith and Mark Anderson) will be gone from this year's Big Eight champions, and Robert knows that it will be tough for a freshman to find a place on the varsity roster. "But they're going to be needing guards. If I can improve my shooting range over the summer, I might be able to play some varsity ball next year."

Another Southeast Missouri athlete, Stan Ray, proved that it is not impossible for a freshman to make good in the Big Eight. Ray was voted Newcomer of the Year while starting at the center position most of the season for the Tigers.

Coach Turlington points out that Roundtree is well prepared for the challenge ahead of him. "He's not going up there cold turkey. Robert has played against some of the MU players on a pick-up level. And he's attended the Tiger summer basketball camp."

Turlington is confident that Roundtree will join the likes of Marshall Craig, Don Tomlinson, Greg Flaker, Stan Ray and himself as area athletes to start for the Tigers. "I think Roundtree and Ray will definitely start on the same team someday," Turlington predicted optimistically.

Kennett's Robert Roundtree (with basketball) has made his intentions to attend the University of Missouri known to Tiger coach Norm Stewart. Roundtree is 6-3 and has been a starter since his freshman year. He plans to play a guard position.

'Taxi Driver' to SeMo

When a modest-budget film titled "Mean Streets" was released a few years ago, it not only generated a wave of acclaim but sent two careers skyrocketing.

For a young director named Martin Scorsese, it was graduation day from low-budget thrillers and documentaries to major filmmaking. For an equally youthful actor named Robert De Niro, it was a personal triumph, capped by a "Best Actor" Award from the New York Film Critics Circle.

Now, Scorsese and De Niro have been reunited for the Columbia Pictures release, "Taxi Driver," which stars De Niro and Cybill Shepherd

A compelling portrait of a New York cab driver who drifts into a frightening fantasy world, the film was written by Paul Schrader and also stars Peter Boyle, Jodie Foster, Albert Brooks, Harvey Keitel, and Leonard Harris.

"Taxi Driver" is Scorsese's first feature film since his direction of Ellen Burstyn in her Academy Award-winning performance in "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore," one of three Oscar nominations given the film.

It took Martin Scorsese twelve years to migrate from New York's Little Italy to Hollywood. Born in New York in 1942, he originally planned to enter the Roman Catholic priesthood. A rabid film buff, he was attending New York University as an English major when he decided upon a film career and became totally involved in the school's cinema department.

While still an undergraduate, Scorsese produced a number of award-winning short subjects and on the strength of those accomplishments raised enough money to produce and direct a feature, "Who's That Knocking At My Door?" with tyro actor Harvey Keitel.

Scorsese next earned his living as a film editor on such documentary films as "Woodstock," "Medicineball Caravan," and "Elvis." He set out for Hollywood in 1970 and won a job with exploitation film-maker Roger Corman to direct "Boxcar Bertha." His direction of "Mean Streets," then firmly established him among the most promising new directors in films. Just prior to his direction of "Taxi Driver," Scorsese filmed a labor of love, a short documentary on his parents and heritage called "Italianamerican," which became a hit at the 1974 New York Film Festival.

Taxi Driver was last score for composer

"Taxi Driver" was the last motion picture score composed by the late Bernard Herrmann. A classical composer of note, Herrmann began composing and conducting for the screen in 1940 and for his first efforts received two Academy Award nominations in 1941 for the scores of "Citizen Kane" and "All That Money Can Buy" and was awarded the Oscar for the latter. Among his notable screen music credits are "The Magnificent Ambersons," "Jane Eyre," "Hangover Square," "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir," "Anna and the King of Siam," for which he again was nominated for the Oscar, "The Snows of Kilimanjaro," "Journey to the Center of the Earth," and "The 7th Voyage of Sinbad."

In a lengthy association with Alfred Hitchcok, Herrmann composed the music for such hits as "The Trouble With Harry," "The Man Who Knew Too Much," "North by Northwest," "Psycho" and "Marnie." He also contributed the music for Francois Truffaut's "Fahrenheit 451" and "The Bride Wore Black," and most recently for "The Twisted Nerve," "Sisters," "Obsession," and had completed the score for "It's Alive" just prior to the music for "Taxi Driver."

Among Herrmann's major compositions were cantatas, a symphony, "Moby Dick"; an opera, "Wuthering Heights," and the music for a number of television specials, among them the 1954 CBS-TV musical version of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" with the late Fredric March and Basil Rathbone.

Len Dawson retires

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "I still enjoy playing," he conceded. "But after all, I'm going to be 41 and not 21. It's time to stop."

Len Dawson, who quarterbacked the Kansas City Chiefs to glory while becoming the top passer in National Football League history, announced Saturday he is retiring after 19 seasons and embarking on a new career in television.

At a hastily called Saturday morning news conference Dawson said he had finalized a three-year contract with NBC-TV.

"The details of the contract have not been worked out yet, but it will enable me to do much more than just football commentary."

Graceful both on and off the field, the articulate, boyishly handsome Dawson achieved immense popularity in the Kansas City area. For several years he was sportscaster for a local radio and television station.

He ranks as the No. 1 all-time National Football League passer with 28,711 yards. His 239 touchdown passes moved him last year into first place ahead of George Blanda among all-time AFC quarterbacks.

"The last three years I've had injury problems and it got tougher and tougher to get back into playing condition," he said. "I've been in pro football 19 years and I'm still able to walk away. I've never had an operation."

Fourteen of Dawson's 19 years were with the Kansas City Chiefs, beginning in 1962 when he joined the Dallas Texans as a free agent. The next year the Texans came to Kansas City and became the Chiefs and Dawson became the starting quarterback.

Dawson guided the Chiefs to three American Football League titles, in 1962, '66 and '69. Then he and the Chiefs reached the top of their world in January 1970 when they upset the Minnesota Vikings, 23-7, in Super Bowl IV.

Flanked by his wife, Jackie, and Chiefs owner Lamar Hunt, Dawson recalled when he entered professional football as the No. 1 draft choice out of Purdue of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"At the time I thought I'd just stay in for just a year or two and then get a legitimate job," he laughed. "I can remember talking to Mr. Art Rooney (owner of the Steelers) that first day. Little did I know that 19 years later I'd still be playing this game."

Hunt said, "First of all, pro football and the Chiefs are losers today. NBC is the victor. The last 14 years with Len on the team have been exhilarating for us."

Fight erupts over beanballs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two Chicago Cubs were ejected from the game with the San Francisco Giants Saturday after two separate incidents triggered by Jim Barr's inside pitches cleared both benches in the third inning.

Barr was warned by plate umpire Ed Runge for brushing back Cubs batter Jose Cardenal — the warning bringing an automatic $50 fine.

While the Giants were disputing the call, Barr and Cardenal exchanged words and the Cubs' outfielder threw his batting helmet at the Giants hurler, who had to be restrained by teammates.

Cardenal was then thrown out of the game.

Bill Madlock then was struck by a Barr pitch and he started toward the mound. Giants' catcher Marc Hill stepped between the two ombatants, but Madlock reached around the catcher and hit Barr in the face with a right hook.

In the ensuing melee, Hill was decked by Madlock and an enraged Giant outfielder Gary Matthews plowed through several Cubs, landing punches. The hardest blow decked George Mitterwald.

When order was restored for the second time, Madlock was allowed to take first base briefly and Barr remained on the mound.

But after much discussion, the umpires ejected Madlock, who protested loudly while pointing to his left shoulder, the spot where Barr's pitch hit him.

The Cubs were leading 1-0 when the flareup occurred. The Giants have lost their last five in a row.

Saints holding final practice

Any interested persons are encouraged to attend the final two pre-season practices of the Sikeston Saints, to be held the next two Sundays, May 2 and 9, at 2:30 p.m. each day.

In order to play for the team, which is a member of the Bi-State League, a player must be over 19 years of age.

There are still about three spots open on the 21 man roster. The season begins Sunday, May 16, with an afternoon season opener at Perryville. The first home game will be held the next Wednesday, May 19, at 7:30 in the V.F.W. Stadium.

Admission will be charged for all home games, but season tickets will be available.

I. State wins girls meet

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State ran away with its third straight Big Eight Conference women's track championship Saturday by rolling up 226 points.

Iowa State had a pair of double winners as 11 records fell in the 17 events. Kansas State mounted the only challenge to the Cyclones, taking second with 186 points.

Kansas was a distant third with 40 points followed by Nebraska (30), Missouri (21), Oklahoma State (17) and Oklahoma (4). Colorado was not represented.

Iowa State freshman Debbie Esser, the American record holder in the 400-meter hurdles, took the 440-yard hurdles in a record 1:01.6 and the 100-meter hrudles in 14.7. She also ran on two winning ISU relay teams.

ISU's Sherry Edwards captured the 220 run in 25.4 and won the 440 in a record 56.8. The Cyclones' Peg Neppel won the three-mile in a record 16:23.4.

The meet's only other double winner was Renee Urish of Kansas State. She won the 880 in 2:17.8 and the mile in 4:54.

Schmidt cracks 12th homerun

ATLANTA (AP) — Major league home run leader Mike Schmidt cracked his 12th of the season to power the Philadelphia Phillies to a 3-0 victory over the slumping Atlanta Braves Saturday in the opener of a twi-night doubleheader.

The loss, Atlanta's fifth in a row, also was the third consecutive shutout suffered by the Braves, who have gone scoreless in their last 30 innings.

The Phils scored a run in the fourth inning on three consecutive singles, the last by Bob Boone. Schmidt made it 2-0 in the fifth when he drilled a pitch from loser Dick Ruthven, 3-2, over the left field fence. Philadelphia added an unearned run in the seventh without a hit.

Winner Larry Christenson, 2-1, who needed seventh-inning relief help, allowed seven hits before tiring. Tom Underwood and Tug McGraw completed the shutout, with McGraw picking up his third save of the season.

Mohammed Ali is still great

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — "You all know that one day I'm gonna fall," said Muhammad Ali, thinking of his last and next fights.

"I'm still the greatest, but the performance last night probably won't show it," the heavyweight boxing champion said in his hotel suite Saturday, the day after he won a 15-round decision over Jimmy Young at Capital Centre.

Although the decision was unanimous, there were several ring-siders who thought Young had the edge, and the outcome was greated by some boos from the crowd of 12,472. Many newspapers reported receiving irate calls, protesting that Young was the winner.

"That fight was worth $20 million to me," Ali said. "That's what I would have lost if he beat me."

The champ then turned to the future, which includes a title defense against Richard Dunn on May 25, an exhibition against Japanese wrestler Antonio Inoki on June 26 and a "big money" fight with Ken Norton in the fall.

"I'm glad it went the way it did," Ali said. "It makes the next fight bigger.

"Everybody wants to see the underdog win. I like the underdog, too."

Ali maintained that he was in shape for the fight, although at 230 pounds he was the heaviest of his career. He said he needed the extra weight because if he was too trim it would have hurt him for the Dunn fight.

"I still won't kill myself," Ali said of his preparation for Dunn. "But Iwill be in shape."

Ali admitted that he wasn't in the best mental condition for the Young fight, which many observers thought was his worst performance.

He gave Young some credit for making him look bad but added that his heavy extra-curricular schedule also hurt him.

"I almost lost my fight because I went to the black museum, to schools and to hospitals."

Royals blast Clarkton

CAMPBELL - The Twin Rivers Royals scored 11 runs on 11 base hits to whip Clarkton 11-5 here Friday afternoon to advance to the semi-finals of the Class A District 10 baseball tournament against Senath-Hornersville next Tuesday afternoon.

Nick McBroom allowed five safeties in picking up the victory. John Roberts was the losing hurler.

Twin Rivers jumped on Roberts in the top of the first inning for four runs. Three singles and an error did the trick. The Royals came right back in the top of the second to chase three more runs home. Larry Acre did most of the damage with a two-run double.

After Twin Rivers had built up an 8-0 lead Clarkton rallied for four runs on four base hits.

George Woods wins shot put

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Discus thrower Mac Wilkins set a world record for the second time in eight days Saturday with a throw of 228 feet at the San Jose Bicentennial Invitational track and field meet.

The former University of Oregon athlete, now competing for the Pacific Coast Club, broke his week-old record of 226-11 on his first throw. It was first announced as 228-10 but reduced to 228 after measurement with a taut steel tape.

The weather conditions were ideal, just as they were a week earlier for Wilkins at the Mount San Antonio relays in Southern California, with a brisk crosswind blowing. John Powell, a PCC teammate of Wilkins, held the old record of 226-8.

There were several other outstanding winning marks here, with a few aided by the wind.

Arnie Robinson won the long jump with a leap of 26-11½, James Butts went 55-7½ in the triple jump and Ron Whitaker of San Jose State edged Clancy Edwards in the 100-meter dash in which both were timed at 10 seconds flat. Whitaker also nipped Edwards in the 200 in 20.4.

George Woods of Chicago won the shot put with a 69-½ effort, while former world record holder Al Feuerbach was forced to watch, scratching from the event because of a pulled hamstring. Woods had two other attempts over 68 feet.

Woman drives car 172 m.p.h.

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Richard Childress led the final group of qualifiers Saturday for Sunday's $216,325 Winston 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race, turning a top lap of 178.900 miles per hour around the 2.66-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway trioval.

Meanwhile, drag racer Paula Murphy hiked her own women's closed course speed record to 172.336 m.p.h., and Johnny Halford cruised to an easy victory after Lennie Pond dropped out in a 200-mile Automobile Racing Club of America stock car race.

The Grand National qualifying for positions 16 through 30 had been rained out Friday and combined with the scheduled time trials for the final 10 spots in the 40-car field. Pond topped the final 10 with a speed of 177.745 m.p.h.

Miss Murphy, who set the old women's record in 1971 of 171.499 m.p.h., said this was her first time in a stock car on an oval track since her earlier record run.

"I think the car is capable of more speed. I was hoping for 175," said Miss Murphy of her Richard Petty Dodge car. "But my legs were shaking so bad I couldn't hold the throttle down hard enough."

Her speed would have been fast enough for 36th starting position in Sunday's 500-miler, but Miss Murphy, who says she is not a women's libber, said, "I don't approve of women in Grand National or Indianapolis cars. I takes too much physical ability and it's too competitive."

Specifically Miss Murphy said she did not support the efforts of women like Janet Guthrie and Arlene Hiss, who are trying to break the sex barrier in the Indianapolis 500.

Miss Murphy said she did not plan any more oval track competition, but would come back if another woman broke her record.

Tolbert hurls a two-hitter

WARDELL - The North Pemiscot Mustangs rode the two-hit pitching of Richard Tolbert into the semi-finals of the Class A District 10 baseball tournament here Friday afternoon with a 7-2 over Delta C-7.

The Mustangs literally walked past the Chargers in the first inning five walks and an error allowed four runners to score before the side could be retired. Danny Crews started on the mound for Delta C-7 and was relieved after two thirds of an inning. Cummings took over and finally retired the side.

Tolbert had his pitching working for him and Delta C-7 was unable to connect on his fastballs and curves. The Chargers scored a run in the third inning on a walk, base hit and an error.

Harvey knocked in the fifth Mustang run in the bottom of the third with a single. The Chargers scored their second unearned run in the top of the fourth on a passed ball.

The final two runs came for North Pemiscot in the bottom of the fifth on two singles, a bunt and a wild pitch.

Larry McKenzie hits grandslam

CHAFFEE -- Designated hitter Larry McKenzie drove home four runs, including a grand-slam homer that broke the game wide open in the third inning as the Chaffee Red-Devils trounced the Illmo-Scott City Rans 12-2 in a Scott-Mississippi Conference game Friday at Chaffee. The Red-Devil record stands at 12-2 going into District play Monday. Chaffee is the defending Class 1-A State Champion.

Scott Wachter outpitched the Braves Scott Wadlington for the victory. Wadlington gave up nine runs in three innings, including a seven-run third. Don Leggett and Don Kiefer drove home runs with RBI singles, followed by a bases loaded walk to Rex Meyer that scored run number three in the inning. McKenzie then touched off his shot, a 250-foot blast down the left field line that made it 9-0.

McKenzie drove in another pair of runs in the fourth when he smashed a drive off the left-center field fence for a double. Don Crowden singles in the fifth to drive in the final run of the game, which gave Chaffee the win by the ten-run rule.

Leggett had drive in Chaffee's first two runs in the first inning with an RBI single. Gary Springs drove in a run for the Rams in the fourth with a single, then scored on Charlie Miller's double.

This year's officers are Hugh McCollum, President; Tony LeGrand, Vice-President; and Gary Stallings, Secretary-Treasurer.

A four-man scramble tournament will kick off the season on May 13, followed by a 36-hole handicap tournament May 15 and 16.

Scrambles are also slated for June 10, June 24, July 15 and August 5.

Another handicap tournament will be held August 21 and 22, and the season will conclude with a banquet and scramble tournament September 9.

Members who have not already done so should send their dues to Gary Stallings, P.O. Box 767, Sikeston.

Leagues need more umpires

The Sikeston Womens and Girls Softball League is in need of umpires for the coming season. Men and women 16 and older are eligible. This is fast pitch softball and the rules are very similar to baseball.

If you are interested in being an umpire for the girls softball season, which runs from June 1 through July 19, contact Sandra York at 471-1997 or 471-4131.

Bold Forbes wins derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Bold Forbes, the spunky little horse from Puerto Rico, smashed Honest Pleasure's balloon Saturday afternoon by defeating what some had called a super horse in a wire to wire victory in the Kentucky Derby.

Flying the red and black colors of Esteban Tizol, Bold Forbes opened a wide lead in the backstretch and hung on as Honest Pleasure made a gallant stretch drive.

Elocutionist, Eugene Cashman's Arkansas derby winner, finished third and Amano, owned by James Irvin, finished fourth.

It was Bold Forbes on the inside and Honest Pleasure on the outside, only a length apart, as they charged down the stretch through the green haze of a smoke bomb thrown on the track just after the race started.

Bold Forbes' victory made it three Derbies in a row for grandsons of the late, great sire Bold Ruler.

At the wire, Bold Forbes had a one-length lead over Honest Pleasure with Elocutionist another 3¼ lengths back and a gap of another 1¼ back to Amano.

It was, truly, "the greatest day of my life," for Tizol, who felt that way even before his horse won America's greatest horse race.

Tizol, 72, however, not only could not be at the Derby because of a recent stroke but was ordered not to watch it on television or watch it on the radio.

It was the greatest of victories for a colt whose owners once thought might never race at all.

Enrique Ubarri, one of Tizol's neighbors, who gets his horses ready for the races, said Bold Forbes was "one of the most backward" yearlings sent to his farm two years ago.

"He showed no signs of speed and did not seem to like racing," Ubarri said.

He simply had his owners—and everyone else—fooled.

In his first start, he was a 35-1 shot and neither the owner, the trainer nor the jockey bet any money on him.

He won by 17 lengths. And he scored by much lesser odds in seven of his eight races as a 2-year-old.

His time in the Derby was 2:013-5 for the 1¼ miles, and he returned $8, $2.40 and $2.60. The Derby record of 1:592-5 was set by Secretariat in 1973. The 102nd Derby, worth $165,-200 to the winner, was raced over a fast track, but under threatening skies. The showers and thundershowers that were forcast didn't make it to Louisville by post time.

Honest Pleasure, sent off as the first odds-on favorite in the Derby since Native Dancer in 1953, paid $2.40 and $2.20 when he finished second—just like Native Dancer. Elocutionist paid $2.60.

Behind Amano at the wire, in order, were On The Sly, Cojak, Inca Roca, Play The Red and Bidson.

Bold Forbes was bred in Kentucky, but immediately taken to Puerto Rico after Tizol purchased him as a yearling for $15,200 at a Fasig-Tipton sale in Lexington.

He was scheduled at first to do all his racing in Puerto Rico, but after he won five in a row, Tizol sent him to the United States and put trainer Laz Barrera in charge of him when Tizol's regular trainer, Bernardo Mongil, suffered a mild stroke and preferred to stay at home.

Bold Forbes suffered only a mild setback in his racing campaign when it was discovered last winter in Californina that he loafed when he held the lead. An inventive set of blinkers with holes in the sides of the eyecups solved the problem. And he now has won four straight.

Assistant trainer John Nazareth said the strategy "was to lay off the pace, but not quite that much. He (Bold Forbes) opened up about three lengths and two would have been enough.

Jockey Angel Cordero Jr. said, "I give credit to both horses. I want to thank Mr. Tizol for giving me this opportunity to put Puerto Rico one more time a little higher."

The crowd of more than 100,-000 watched as Cordero, in the way he knows best—by winning—thanked Tizol, the man who gave him his start in racing 15 years ago at El Commandante in San Juan.

Jockey Braulio Baeza said Honest Pleasure "hesitated a little bit" when he saw the last dregs of the smoke. National guardsmen raked the smoke bomb to the outer edge of the track almost instantly after it was thrown, but the green haze hung on until after the race was over.

Baeza said Honest Pleasure "tried hard but didn't have it. I felt that Bold Forbes was slowing down in the stretch, but the little horse kept on running. It surprised me that he was so game at the end."

Bold Forbes opened a five-length lead after the first half-mile and was on top by three after six furlongs. At the head of the stretch, he led by one-half length and widened it in the final strides to a full length.

His start to finish victory is the first since Riva Ridge did it in 1972.

Honest Pleasure raced second throughout the 1¼ miles with Elocutionist and Amano sharing the third and fourth positions the entire distance.

The victory, Bold Forbes' 11th in 14 career starts, increases his career bankroll to $366,639.

Elocutionist's rider, J.L. Lively, said he had "a clear shot turning for home. He made a good move. He gave me all he had but it wasn't enough."

Honest Pleasure won last year's juvenile championship with six victories in eight starts, including four important stakes races last fall. This year, he had been undefeated in four races, including the Flamingo, the Florida Derby and the Blue Grass Stakes.

Baeza disappointed after loss in Derby

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "The little horse was just too game—I couldn't catch him," a somber and disappointed Braulio Baeza said Saturday after failing to guide odds-on favorite Honest Pleasure to victory in the 102nd Kentucky Derby.

The little horse was Bold Forbes, a dark bay cannonball that burst to the front and staved off Honest Pleasure's strongest challenge to win by a length.

Baeza, the country's top jockey in 1975, refused to blame his pre-game put-down by trainer LeRoy Jolley for his disappointing failure.

"I rode the horse—he didn't," the 36-year-old Panamanian said. "I followed his instructions.

"He told me to lay back in second or third during the early part of the race. I did just what he told me. But when I made my move turning into the stretch the little horse kept going.

"He surprised me. He is a gutty little horse."

An apparent freeze in relations between jockey and trainer of the Derby favorite surfaced 48 hours before the race when Jolley erased Baeza's name as rider in entering Honest Pleasure Thursday and wrote "no boy."

The act created considerable confusion before Jolley, after being pressured by Churchill Downs officials, announced Baeza as the rider.

Both Jolley and the horse's owner, Bertram Firestone, shrugged off the incident as an "oversight." Track insiders said the misunderstanding ran deeper than that.

There were reports that Baeza, who had ridden the colt to eight victories, might be replaced in the saddle for the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes, the remaining two jewels of racing's Triple Crown for 3-year-olds.

But Jolley said after the race: "Baeza raced a perfect race. I have no complaints."

Asked if he wanted another shot at Bold Forbes, Baeza shrugged his shoulders.

"I guess so."

Asked if he expected to continue riding Honest Pleasure in the remaining major events, the impassive Panamanian again showed little emotion: "Who knows?"

"I listen to what he says but I do not always do it," Baeza said. "I am on the horse. I must react to what develops."

White Sox beat Tigers

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Jason Thompson slugged a two-run double and his first major league home run and Vern Ruhle pitched a five-hitter to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 10-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox Saturday.

Thompson, a 21-year-old first baseman who came up from the minor leagues a week ago, doubled off loser Bart Johnson after Willie Horton and Rusty Staub had walked with two out in the first inning.

The Tigers piled up a 7-0 lead before Thompson hit his homer in the seventh. He also singled in the eighth. Staub, Alex Johnson and Ron LeFlore each chipped in with two hits and LeFlore also stole four bases.

Ruhle, gaining his first decision of the season, didn't allow more than one baserunner in any inning until the seventh when Jim Spencer walked with two out and Bucky Dent singled before Jack Brohamer grounded out to end the inning. A one-out homer by Jorge Orta in the ninth spoiled Ruhle's shutout.

In the eighth, Horton hit his sixth homer of the year.

Bench hits 3rd homer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Homers by Dan Driessen and Johnny Bench, his third in two days, and the eight-strikeout pitching of Don Gullett gave the Cincinnati Reds a 6-1 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday night.

Gullett, 2-0, with both victories over Montreal, gave up a home run to Pete Mackanin and two hits to Bombo Rivera before being lifted in the eighth inning. Pat Zachary pitched the ninth for the Reds.

Cincinnati broke the game open with three runs in each the fourth and fifth innings, chasing loser Don Carrithers, 1-2.

Carrithers held Cincinnati hitless for three innings, then Dan Driessen hit his first homer of the season to open the fourth.

Carrithers struck out Bench, then gave up doubles to Mike Lum and George Foster for the second run of the inning. Gullett, helping his own cause, lined a single through the box to score Foster and the Reds went ahead 3-0.

Mackanin blasted his homer in the fifth, his second of the year and the first run given up by Gullett this season.

Bench then clouted a three-run homer in the fifth, chasing Carrithers.

H. H. "Bud" Townsend Jr. of New Madrid killed his gobbler at 7:15 a.m. Friday on Donaldson Point near New Madrid. The turkey sports a 9-inch beard. Townsend's turkey was the 16th reported in New Madrid County on lands leased by the New Madrid County Sportsman Club.

Roundtree will wear black and gold again- this time for Mizzou

By CHARLIE FRANCIS

University of Missouri basketball coach Norm Stewart has gone once again to the talent pool known as Southeast Missouri in search of a future prospect for his powerful Tiger basketball program.

The University announced Friday that Kennett Indian star Robert Roundtree has decided to enroll at the University this fall on a basketball scholarship.

Roundtree, contacted by phone Friday at his Kennett home, said that he told Stewart of his decision to attend MU this week after visiting the University campus earlier in the week. A formal letter-of- intent is expected to be signed within the next two weeks.

"I went up to talk to coach Stewart Sunday," said the 6-3, 185-pound athlete. "He looked at me for awhile to see what I could do, then showed me around."

Roundtree has been a unanimous choice for Semo All-Conference honors each of the past three years, along with being tabbed for All-District 3-A honors as well.

Despite his 21.4 points-per-game scoring average this past season, which was tops in the conference, the senior was snubbed when it came time for All-State balloting, having to settle for honorable mention of both the coaches' and writers' squads.

But Kennett coach Terry Turlington doesn't think the fact that his star didn't make All-State is important. "That thing at Columbia (the All-State meeting) every year is a circus," said the outgoing Indian coach, who also coached MU great Don Tomlinson at Kennett. "I definitely think Robert was the best ballplayer in Southeast Missouri this year.

Turlington is familiar with the MU cage program, having been a part of it for four years, from 1958-62, and noted that Norm Stewart must know what he is doing. "You can't have a program like theirs without good recruiting," said Turlington. "Stewart thinks he can play ball. It doesn't really matter what the other coaches and the sportswriters think."

Roundtree's career rebounding average of 14.5 per game shattered Tomlinson's old mark of 12.9 for the Kennett school. His single-game high of 43 points this season against Caruthersville also broke an Indian record held by Tomlinson.

Indications are that Roundtree will be used as a swing guard, meaning that he won't be handling the ball as much as the other guard. "He'll probably be given the chance to post his man," said Turlington.

Roundtree himself is expecting to play a season of basketball on the MU freshman team, helping the slender senior to make the transition from frontline to guard. He played forward his first two seasons at Kennett, then played some center this year. "I'm mostly going to have to improve my ballhandling and my shooting," noted the articulate Roundtree, who says he presently feels uncomforable shooting from outside of 15 feet. "I'll have to work on my defense, too."

But Roundtree, who has put about ten pounds onto his 6-3 frame since the season ended, has hopes of possibly playing some varsity ball next season, if he can make the transition soon enough. Only two players (Willie Smith and Mark Anderson) will be gone from this year's Big Eight champions, and Robert knows that it will be tough for a freshman to find a place on the varsity roster. "But they're going to be needing guards. If I can improve my shooting range over the summer, I might be able to play some varsity ball next year."

Another Southeast Missouri athlete, Stan Ray, proved that it is not impossible for a freshman to make good in the Big Eight. Ray was voted Newcomer of the Year while starting at the center position most of the season for the Tigers.

Coach Turlington points out that Roundtree is well prepared for the challenge ahead of him. "He's not going up there cold turkey. Robert has played against some of the MU players on a pick-up level. And he's attended the Tiger summer basketball camp."

Turlington is confident that Roundtree will join the likes of Marshall Craig, Don Tomlinson, Greg Flaker, Stan Ray and himself as area athletes to start for the Tigers. "I think Roundtree and Ray will definitely start on the same team someday," Turlington predicted optimistically.

Kennett's Robert Roundtree (with basketball) has made his intentions to attend the University of Missouri known to Tiger coach Norm Stewart. Roundtree is 6-3 and has been a starter since his freshman year. He plans to play a guard position.

Sikeston's Burger King program to help in fund-raising

The Sikeston Little League and Girl's Softball League, in cooperation with Sikeston's Burger King Restaurant, will be conducting its 2nd Annual "Have It Your Way" fund-raising program from April 29 through May 16. The total program includes some 340 boys and 180 girls across Sikeston.

Sikeston residents and merchants will be offered "Have It Your Way" Delicious Dollars for $1.00 each. Each Delicious Dollar purchased is redeemable for a full $1.00 worth of food and-or beverage of the purchaser's choice. One half (50c) of each $1.00 Delicious Dollar sold will be donated to the local youth ball program for purchase of equipment, etc. As a first, this year's program will include the 180 girls participating in the girl's softball league, which is headed up by Nora Springs. Last year's program, conducted with the Sikeston Little League, Jr. and Sr. Babe Ruth League, netted $4,477.00 for use in the funding of the programs. It is expected that with the cooperation of Sikeston residents the program this year could quite easily lend a minimum of $6,000.00 support to the kids of Sikeston. Jim Caskey, newly appointed manager of the Sikeston Burger King Restaurant, said the program was initiated to help the Sikeston kids play ball.

An incentive package similar to last year's program has been produced to assist the youngsters to get out and sell Delicious Dollars. The Grand Prize is a trip to St. Louis on June 20 for a 1:15 ballgame between the St. Louis Cardinals and the San Diego Padres for the two top selling teams, their managers and assistants. The trip includes transportation, lunch from the Burger King Restaurant in route to the game, $1.00 spending money per winner, and a souvenir photograph, plus a time to remember. The top three ticket sellers will receive the Second Prize, a $25 gift certificate each, redeemable at a local sporting goods store of their choice. The 540+ potential Third Prize winners is each ballplayer who sells a minimum of 25 Delicious Dollars receives a free dinner from Burger King: A Whopper, french fries and coke.

The introductory meeting will be held on Thursday, May 29, at 7:00 p.m. at the Sikeston High School Fieldhouse. All league players and their parents are requested to be present.

The greatest distance between any two points in the United States is the 5,850 miles from Elliot Key, Fla., to Hawaii's Kure Island.

Bostock shines in victory

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota's Lyman Bostock singled twice, drove in two runs and scored two as the Twins beat the Milwaukee Brewers 9-5 in a nationally televised game Saturday.

Bostock's fourth-inning sacrifice fly sent the Twins into a 6-2 advantage and reliever Bill Campbell survived five shaky innings for the victory to boost his record to 3-1.

The Brewers scored twice in the sixth and moved to within 6-5 in the seventh when Charlie Moore's triple scored Sixto Lezcano.

The Twins, however, added three insurance runs in the eighth on successive RBI doubles by Dan Ford and Danny Thompson and a run-producing grounder by Bostock.

The Twins scored twice in the first as Bostock started the uprising with a single, moved to third on a double by Larry Hisle and scored on a double play grounder. Hisle then scored on a wild pitch by Brewer starting pitcher Pete Broberg.

Minnesota added two more runs on a bases-loaded single by Steve Braun in the third to make the score 4-1, and finish Broberg, 1-1.

The Brewers cut the deficit to 4-2 in the fourth on Pedro Garcia's second RBI single of the game.

The Twins went ahead 6-2 in the fourth on a pop single by Dave McKay and Bostock's long fly to center.

Bostock, who a year ago at this time was out of the lineup with a broken ankle, boosted his average to .311 and was one of four Twins with a pair of hits. Hisle, Braun and Ford also had two hits.

Milwaukee also had four players with a pair of hits—Don Money, Robin Yount, Moore and Garcia.

Minnesota starter Joe Decker, who has been battling control problems the past two seasons, was removed in the fifth after he opened the inning by walking Yount and George Scott. Decker, 1-2, walked five in four innings and now has given up 20 walks in 23 innings.

Campbell, who went into the game with a 1.80 earned run average and a pair of saves, retired the last five Brewer hitters after being hit solidly in the sixth and seventh innings. However, the lanky right-hander retired home run king Hank Aaron in three critical situations with runners on base. Campbell fanned him with two on in the fifth and then got the veteran slugger on a two fly balls to left field, ending the sixth and eighth innings.

Len Dawson retires

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "I still enjoy playing," he conceded. "But after all, I'm going to be 41 and not 21. It's time to stop."

Len Dawson, who quarterbacked the Kansas City Chiefs to glory while becoming the top passer in National Football League history, announced Saturday he is retiring after 19 seasons and embarking on a new career in television.

At a hastily called Saturday morning news conference Dawson said he had finalized a three-year contract with NBC-TV.

"The details of the contract have not been worked out yet, but it will enable me to do much more than just football commentary."

Graceful both on and off the field, the articulate, boyishly handsome Dawson achieved immense popularity in the Kansas City area. For several years he was sportscaster for a local radio and television station.

He ranks as the No. 1 all-time National Football League passer with 28,711 yards. His 239 touchdown passes moved him last year into first place ahead of George Blanda among all-time AFC quarterbacks.

"The last three years I've had injury problems and it got tougher and tougher to get back into playing condition," he said. "I've been in pro football 19 years and I'm still able to walk away. I've never had an operation."

Fourteen of Dawson's 19 years were with the Kansas City Chiefs, beginning in 1962 when he joined the Dallas Texans as a free agent. The next year the Texans came to Kansas City and became the Chiefs and Dawson became the starting quarterback.

Dawson guided the Chiefs to three American Football League titles, in 1962, '66 and '69. Then he and the Chiefs reached the top of their world in January 1970 when they upset the Minnesota Vikings, 23-7, in Super Bowl IV.

Flanked by his wife, Jackie, and Chiefs owner Lamar Hunt, Dawson recalled when he entered professional football as the No. 1 draft choice out of Purdue of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"At the time I thought I'd just stay in for just a year or two and then get a legitimate job," he laughed. "I can remember talking to Mr. Art Rooney (owner of the Steelers) that first day. Little did I know that 19 years later I'd still be playing this game."

Hunt said, "First of all, pro football and the Chiefs are losers today. NBC is the victor. The last 14 years with Len on the team have been exhilarating for us."

Fight erupts over beanballs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two Chicago Cubs were ejected from the game with the San Francisco Giants Saturday after two separate incidents triggered by Jim Barr's inside pitches cleared both benches in the third inning.

Barr was warned by plate umpire Ed Runge for brushing back Cubs batter Jose Cardenal — the warning bringing an automatic $50 fine.

While the Giants were disputing the call, Barr and Cardenal exchanged words and the Cubs' outfielder threw his batting helmet at the Giants hurler, who had to be restrained by teammates.

Cardenal was then thrown out of the game.

Bill Madlock then was struck by a Barr pitch and he started toward the mound. Giants' catcher Marc Hill stepped between the two ombatants, but Madlock reached around the catcher and hit Barr in the face with a right hook.

In the ensuing melee, Hill was decked by Madlock and an enraged Giant outfielder Gary Matthews plowed through several Cubs, landing punches. The hardest blow decked George Mitterwald.

When order was restored for the second time, Madlock was allowed to take first base briefly and Barr remained on the mound.

But after much discussion, the umpires ejected Madlock, who protested loudly while pointing to his left shoulder, the spot where Barr's pitch hit him.

The Cubs were leading 1-0 when the flareup occurred. The Giants have lost their last five in a row.

I. State wins girls meet

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State ran away with its third straight Big Eight Conference women's track championship Saturday by rolling up 226 points.

Iowa State had a pair of double winners as 11 records fell in the 17 events. Kansas State mounted the only challenge to the Cyclones, taking second with 186 points.

Kansas was a distant third with 40 points followed by Nebraska (30), Missouri (21), Oklahoma State (17) and Oklahoma (4). Colorado was not represented.

Iowa State freshman Debbie Esser, the American record holder in the 400-meter hurdles, took the 440-yard hurdles in a record 1:01.6 and the 100-meter hrudles in 14.7. She also ran on two winning ISU relay teams.

ISU's Sherry Edwards captured the 220 run in 25.4 and won the 440 in a record 56.8. The Cyclones' Peg Neppel won the three-mile in a record 16:23.4.

The meet's only other double winner was Renee Urish of Kansas State. She won the 880 in 2:17.8 and the mile in 4:54.

Schmidt cracks 12th homerun

ATLANTA (AP) — Major league home run leader Mike Schmidt cracked his 12th of the season to power the Philadelphia Phillies to a 3-0 victory over the slumping Atlanta Braves Saturday in the opener of a twi-night doubleheader.

The loss, Atlanta's fifth in a row, also was the third consecutive shutout suffered by the Braves, who have gone scoreless in their last 30 innings.

The Phils scored a run in the fourth inning on three consecutive singles, the last by Bob Boone. Schmidt made it 2-0 in the fifth when he drilled a pitch from loser Dick Ruthven, 3-2, over the left field fence. Philadelphia added an unearned run in the seventh without a hit.

Winner Larry Christenson, 2-1, who needed seventh-inning relief help, allowed seven hits before tiring. Tom Underwood and Tug McGraw completed the shutout, with McGraw picking up his third save of the season.

Mohammed Ali is still great

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — "You all know that one day I'm gonna fall," said Muhammad Ali, thinking of his last and next fights.

"I'm still the greatest, but the performance last night probably won't show it," the heavyweight boxing champion said in his hotel suite Saturday, the day after he won a 15-round decision over Jimmy Young at Capital Centre.

Although the decision was unanimous, there were several ring-siders who thought Young had the edge, and the outcome was greated by some boos from the crowd of 12,472. Many newspapers reported receiving irate calls, protesting that Young was the winner.

"That fight was worth $20 million to me," Ali said. "That's what I would have lost if he beat me."

The champ then turned to the future, which includes a title defense against Richard Dunn on May 25, an exhibition against Japanese wrestler Antonio Inoki on June 26 and a "big money" fight with Ken Norton in the fall.

"I'm glad it went the way it did," Ali said. "It makes the next fight bigger.

"Everybody wants to see the underdog win. I like the underdog, too."

Ali maintained that he was in shape for the fight, although at 230 pounds he was the heaviest of his career. He said he needed the extra weight because if he was too trim it would have hurt him for the Dunn fight.

"I still won't kill myself," Ali said of his preparation for Dunn. "But Iwill be in shape."

Ali admitted that he wasn't in the best mental condition for the Young fight, which many observers thought was his worst performance.

He gave Young some credit for making him look bad but added that his heavy extra-curricular schedule also hurt him.

"I almost lost my fight because I went to the black museum, to schools and to hospitals."

Tolbert hurls a two-hitter

WARDELL - The North Pemiscot Mustangs rode the two-hit pitching of Richard Tolbert into the semi-finals of the Class A District 10 baseball tournament here Friday afternoon with a 7-2 over Delta C-7.

The Mustangs literally walked past the Chargers in the first inning five walks and an error allowed four runners to score before the side could be retired. Danny Crews started on the mound for Delta C-7 and was relieved after two thirds of an inning. Cummings took over and finally retired the side.

Tolbert had his pitching working for him and Delta C-7 was unable to connect on his fastballs and curves. The Chargers scored a run in the third inning on a walk, base hit and an error.

Harvey knocked in the fifth Mustang run in the bottom of the third with a single. The Chargers scored their second unearned run in the top of the fourth on a passed ball.

The final two runs came for North Pemiscot in the bottom of the fifth on two singles, a bunt and a wild pitch.

Larry McKenzie hits grandslam

CHAFFEE -- Designated hitter Larry McKenzie drove home four runs, including a grand-slam homer that broke the game wide open in the third inning as the Chaffee Red-Devils trounced the Illmo-Scott City Rans 12-2 in a Scott-Mississippi Conference game Friday at Chaffee. The Red-Devil record stands at 12-2 going into District play Monday. Chaffee is the defending Class 1-A State Champion.

Scott Wachter outpitched the Braves Scott Wadlington for the victory. Wadlington gave up nine runs in three innings, including a seven-run third. Don Leggett and Don Kiefer drove home runs with RBI singles, followed by a bases loaded walk to Rex Meyer that scored run number three in the inning. McKenzie then touched off his shot, a 250-foot blast down the left field line that made it 9-0.

McKenzie drove in another pair of runs in the fourth when he smashed a drive off the left-center field fence for a double. Don Crowden singles in the fifth to drive in the final run of the game, which gave Chaffee the win by the ten-run rule.

Leggett had drive in Chaffee's first two runs in the first inning with an RBI single. Gary Springs drove in a run for the Rams in the fourth with a single, then scored on Charlie Miller's double.

Royals blast Clarkton

CAMPBELL - The Twin Rivers Royals scored 11 runs on 11 base hits to whip Clarkton 11-5 here Friday afternoon to advance to the semi-finals of the Class A District 10 baseball tournament against Senath-Hornersville next Tuesday afternoon.

Nick McBroom allowed five safeties in picking up the victory. John Roberts was the losing hurler.

Twin Rivers jumped on Roberts in the top of the first inning for four runs. Three singles and an error did the trick. The Royals came right back in the top of the second to chase three more runs home. Larry Acre did most of the damage with a two-run double.

After Twin Rivers had built up an 8-0 lead Clarkton rallied for four runs on four base hits.

Larry Acre knocked in four runs in the game to lead the Royals in the offense department.

George Woods wins shot put

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Discus thrower Mac Wilkins set a world record for the second time in eight days Saturday with a throw of 228 feet at the San Jose Bicentennial Invitational track and field meet.

The former University of Oregon athlete, now competing for the Pacific Coast Club, broke his week-old record of 226-11 on his first throw. It was first announced as 228-10 but reduced to 228 after measurement with a taut steel tape.

The weather conditions were ideal, just as they were a week earlier for Wilkins at the Mount San Antonio relays in Southern California, with a brisk crosswind blowing. John Powell, a PCC teammate of Wilkins, held the old record of 226-8.

There were several other outstanding winning marks here, with a few aided by the wind.

Arnie Robinson won the long jump with a leap of 26-11½, James Butts went 55-7½ in the triple jump and Ron Whitaker of San Jose State edged Clancy Edwards in the 100-meter dash in which both were timed at 10 seconds flat. Whitaker also nipped Edwards in the 200 in 20.4.

George Woods of Chicago won the shot put with a 69-½ effort, while former world record holder Al Feuerbach was forced to watch, scratching from the event because of a pulled hamstring. Woods had two other attempts over 68 feet.

Woman drives car 172 m.p.h.

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Richard Childress led the final group of qualifiers Saturday for Sunday's $216,325 Winston 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race, turning a top lap of 178.900 miles per hour around the 2.66-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway trioval.

Meanwhile, drag racer Paula Murphy hiked her own women's closed course speed record to 172.336 m.p.h., and Johnny Halford cruised to an easy victory after Lennie Pond dropped out in a 200-mile Automobile Racing Club of America stock car race.

The Grand National qualifying for positions 16 through 30 had been rained out Friday and combined with the scheduled time trials for the final 10 spots in the 40-car field. Pond topped the final 10 with a speed of 177.745 m.p.h.

Miss Murphy, who set the old women's record in 1971 of 171.499 m.p.h., said this was her first time in a stock car on an oval track since her earlier record run.

"I think the car is capable of more speed. I was hoping for 175," said Miss Murphy of her Richard Petty Dodge car. "But my legs were shaking so bad I couldn't hold the throttle down hard enough."

Her speed would have been fast enough for 36th starting position in Sunday's 500-miler, but Miss Murphy, who says she is not a women's libber, said, "I don't approve of women in Grand National or Indianapolis cars. I takes too much physical ability and it's too competitive."

Specifically Miss Murphy said she did not support the efforts of women like Janet Guthrie and Arlene Hiss, who are trying to break the sex barrier in the Indianapolis 500.

Miss Murphy said she did not plan any more oval track competition, but would come back if another woman broke her record.

Judge refuses to block extradition of Garrison

GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP) — A federal judge refused Friday to block the extradition of Dr. Norman A. Garrison Jr. of Corinth to stand trial in Missouri in the slaying of his former wife.

U.S. District Court Judge William C. Keady ordered Garrison, 34, turned over to Missouri authorities to stand trial in the shooting and beating death of Lee Ann Garrison, whose body was found at her Kennett, Mo., home Sept. 8, 1974.

But the judge granted a 10-day stay before the order is executed to give Garrison's attorneys time to appeal. Garrison remains free on $100,000 bond and defense attorney John Farese Sr. of Ashland said he would appeal to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans.

In his 32-page opinion, Keady reviewed evidence presented during an earlier hearing and concluded that Garrison had failed to prove "beyond a reasonable doubt" that he was not in Missouri at the time of the slaying.

He said extradition was not intended as a preliminary inquiry into the merits of a c riminal prosecution but was simply a proceeding by which an accused person could be brought before the appropriate court for adjudication.

Keady cited court rulings saying a person sought through extradition should not be released unless it appeared beyond a reasonable doubt that he was outside the demanding state at the time of a c crime.

From a review of the evidence, "it is not possible to say with a certainty where the truth lies," Keady said. "We thus conclude that Garrison failed to sustain his burden on the issue of proving beyond a reasonable doubt his absence from the state of Missouri at the time of the alleged homicide."

The primary contention of Garrison's lawyers was that the state of Missouri had failed to produce evidence showing probable cause, or a statement of allegations against the physician.

But Keady held that Missouri had found probable cause for Garrison's arrest by its issuance of an arrest warrant.

Garrison contends that he was on a houseboat at Pickwick Lake in northeast Mississippi when his former wife was killed. During earlier state court proceedings, defense witnesses said they saw Garrison at the lake.

New Madrid R-1 CTA for change in retirement law

HOWARDVILLE — The Community Teachers Association of New Madrid County R-1 enlarged school district plans to take action for changes in the public school retirement law that will allow retirement at age 60, or after 30 years experience with maximum benefits.

The teachers Wednesday unanimously approved a motion, introduced by Mrs. Edith Dial of Portageville, "that the membership of the CTA authorize the executive board, with the aid of legal advice if necessary, to formulate a plan of action directed towards influencing legislation change in the public school retirement law. These changes should allow retirement, receiving maximum earned benefits, at age 60 or with minimum of 30 years of creditable experience."

Mrs. Dial told the teachers that the public school retirement system of Missouri, with a net worth of $736.5 million at the end of June 1975 and a projected balance of $840 million at the end of June this year, "could well afford an increase in retirement benefits."

She noted that the earned interest alone is more than the system is paying out in retirement allowances and benefits. Interest on securities amounted to $45 million, and retirement allowances and benefits expended were approximately $34 million. Operating expenses that included investment expenses amounted to $207,500 and actuarial fees and expenses totaled $16,500.

The total expenses, benefits and withdrawals, Mrs. Dial said, were more than paid for out of the interest, and the system "never spent the first penny of the school board contributions or teacher's contributions".

She called on the CTA teachers to vigorously work for the changes. She suggested that the teachers flood the state legislators with letters, send CTA delegates to Jefferson City or hire a lobbyist, and to seek support from other CTA groups, together with legal advice for this action.

Mrs. Dial referred to a 1.5 per cent increase in contributions to the system that will cost New Madrid County R-1 teachers $50,000 and the board of education $50,000, which she said could have gone for an increase in teachers' salaries.

President Jim Mauk reported that the CTA salary committee had recommended a $250 annual increase to the base salary and the school board had approved a $150 increase. Mauk said the board will continue the present teacher insurance and medical programs.

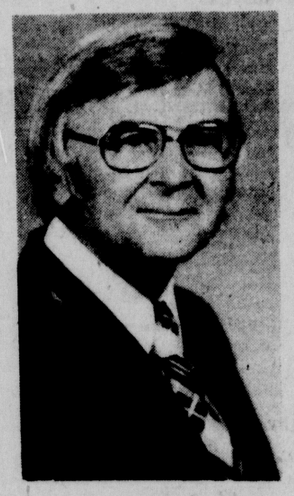
'Older people image'

By ARTHUR C. FULBRIGHT



The image of older persons in America is devastating and destructive. They are viewed as a drag on society - useless in a youth centered culture - a helpless anachronism in a world of rapid change.

Because the older persons are useless and nonproductive, in a world that measures worth by productivity, they are deviant, strangers to their land and their time by virtue of chronological age. So they are shelved, isolated, abandoned. Reading this societal image accurately, the older persons feel useless and worthless.

But that image, although widely held, is a myth that helps perpetuate the unconscionable rejection of those who built the foundation of our society. Older persons see that image reflected in the eyes of their friends, their children and shrivel in personality and social contributions. Society lives by this false image and thus helps to disengage our older men and women from any form of useful productivity.

This image of the useless, decrepit older person has long since been disproved in laboratories and in social interaction.. If older persons totter, it is only because they do not exercise or follow good nutritional programs. If they are dull it is only because they are expected to be dull and lack excitement in their lives and stimulation for their minds.

There is nothing in the aging process that decrees older persons have to be either weak or incompentent. So, if they are it is due to a lack of opportunity given them to invest the wisdom of their years in meaningful ways.

I sincerely believe that the last years of life are precisely for the intergration of previous experiences and wisdom, that is the best time for the investigation of the ultimate meanings of life!

In about 30 years, over half of all persons in the United States will be above 50 years of age. Therefore, we need to destroy myths about aging, and to make the last part of life a magnificent achievement in spiritual and social growth.

Sikeston's Burger King program to help in fund-raising

The Sikeston Little League and Girl's Softball League, in cooperation with Sikeston's Burger King Restaurant, will be conducting its 2nd Annual "Have It Your Way" fund-raising program from April 29 through May 16. The total program includes some 340 boys and 180 girls across Sikeston.

Sikeston residents and merchants will be offered "Have It Your Way" Delicious Dollars for $1.00 each. Each Delicious Dollar purchased is redeemable for a full $1.00 worth of food and-or beverage of the purchaser's choice. One half (50c) of each $1.00 Delicious Dollar sold will be donated to the local youth ball program for purchase of equipment, etc. As a first, this year's program will include the 180 girls participating in the girl's softball league, which is headed up by Nora Springs. Last year's program, conducted with the Sikeston Little League, Jr. and Sr. Babe Ruth League, netted $4,477.00 for use in the funding of the programs. It is expected that with the cooperation of Sikeston residents the program this year could quite easily lend a minimum of $6,000.00 support to the kids of Sikeston. Jim Caskey, newly appointed manager of the Sikeston Burger King Restaurant, said the program was initiated to help the Sikeston kids play ball.

An incentive package similar to last year's program has been produced to assist the youngsters to get out and sell Delicious Dollars. The Grand Prize is a trip to St. Louis on June 20 for a 1:15 ballgame between the St. Louis Cardinals and the San Diego Padres for the two top selling teams, their managers and assistants. The trip includes transportation, lunch from the Burger King Restaurant in route to the game, $1.00 spending money per winner, and a souvenir photograph, plus a time to remember. The top three ticket sellers will receive the Second Prize, a $25 gift certificate each, redeemable at a local sporting goods store of their choice. The 540+ potential Third Prize winners is each ballplayer who sells a minimum of 25 Delicious Dollars receives a free dinner from Burger King: A Whopper, french tries and coke.

The introductory meeting will be held on Thursday, May 29, at 7:00 p.m. at the Sikeston High School Fieldhouse. All league players and their parents are requested to be present.

The greatest distance between any two points in the United States is the 5,850 miles from Elliot Key, Fla., to Hawaii's Kure Island.

Bostock shines in victory

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota's Lyman Bostock singled twice, drove in two runs and scored two as the Twins beat the Milwaukee Brewers 9-5 in a nationally televised game Saturday.

Bostock's fourth-inning sacrifice fly sent the Twins into a 6-2 advantage and reliever Bill Campbell survived five shaky innings for the victory to boost his record to 3-1.

The Brewers scored twice in the sixth and moved to within 6-5 in the seventh when Charlie Moore's triple scored Sixto Lezcano.

The Twins, however, added three insurance runs in the eighth on successive RBI doubles by Dan Ford and Danny Thompson and a run-producing grounder by Bostock.

The Twins scored twice in the first as Bostock started the uprising with a single, moved to third on a double by Larry Hisle and scored on a double play grounder. Hisle then scored on a wild pitch by Brewer starting pitcher Pete Broberg.

Minnesota added two more runs on a bases-loaded single by Steve Braun in the third to make the score 4-1, and finish Broberg, 1-1.

The Brewers cut the deficit to 4-2 in the fourth on Pedro Garcia's second RBI single of the game.

The Twins went ahead 6-2 in the fourth on a pop single by Dave McKay and Bostock's long fly to center.

Bostock, who a year ago at this time was out of the lineup with a broken ankle, boosted his average to .311 and was one of four Twins with a pair of hits. Hisle, Braun and Ford also had two hits.

Milwaukee also had four players with a pair of hits—Don Money, Robin Yount, Moore and Garcia.

Minnesota starter Joe Decker, who has been battling control problems the past two seasons, was removed in the fifth after he opened the inning by walking Yount and George Scott. Decker, 1-2, walked five in four innings and now has given up 20 walks in 23 innings.

Campbell, who went into the game with a 1.80 earned run average and a pair of saves, retired the last five Brewer hitters after being hit solidly in the sixth and seventh innings. However, the lanky right-hander retired home run king Hank Aaron in three critical situations with runners on base. Campbell fanned him with two on in the fifth and then got the veteran slugger on a two fly balls to left field, ending the sixth and eighth innings.

Solzhenitsyn Tells More About Russia's 'Cancer'

THE GULAG ARCHIPELAGO II. By Aleksandr I. Solzhenitsyn. Harper & Row. 712 Pages. $15.

Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn takes us once again into that land of horror, the island chain of labor camps that makes up his archipelago run by Gulag, the Central Labor Camp Administration of the Soviet Union under Lenin and Stalin. Stretching from one end of the country to the other, the labor camp islands, cut off from normal human society, formed the backbone of Soviet terrorism. The author estimated 66 million inmates died there in four decades.

Gulag II continues the tragic documentation of brutality and cruelty begun in Gulag I. The first volume introduced the labor camp system, its founding by Lenin, expansion by Stalin and procedures of arrest, interrogation and transport to the archipelago camps. Volume 2 now tells of life in the camps.

In numbing detail we are told of 'prisoners' grasping for meager rations of bread and thin nettle gruel, of exhausting labor on ill-conceived and often useless projects in bitter cold with inadequate tools, of the cruelty of the keepers, of filth and disease.

The tragic account is interspersed with the author's indignant judgments, bitter and sarcastic. At first this may strike the reader as shrill, but as the evidence unfolds the shrillness finds a justification.

Solzhenitsyn pictures the archipelago as a loathsome cancer that has poisoned the Soviet nation for two generations, causing citizens to suffer constant fear, mistrust of one another, corruption and lying as a way of life. He is hard on his fellow citizens, of whom he says: "There is no man who has typed even one page — without lying. There is no man who has spoken from a rostrum — without lying. There is no man who has spoken into a microphone — without lying."

"Peace of mind is something our citizens have never known," he observes, after describing the waves of persecution that sent millions, many of them innocent, into the camps. In any given year he estimates 10 to 15 million inhabited the archipelago.

Much of the material derives from the eight years Solzhenitsyn himself spent in the labor camps. Still more was gleaned from his contacts with other prisoners and tales that reached him later, as well as accounts published in the Soviet Union after Nikita Khrushchev began disbanding the camps following Stalin's death.

Gulag I and II are a monument to Solzhenitsyn's drive to tell the truth of a sordid chapter in human history.

Episodic Novel About A Family Of Soldiers

A TIME OF SOLDIERS. By Andrew Jolly. Dutton. 306 Pages. $8.95.

"A Time of Soldiers" is a discursive survey of three generations — grandfather, father, son — for whom soldiering was more than a career. It was a way of life, it was religion, patriotism and sex. It was a struggle of the soul in which, whether they survived or not, they were all defeated.

Capt. Jack Lear, cavalry officer, was assigned to train Mexican dissidents and died with them in mid-Depression times. His son, Ben, was a pilot in World War II, and disappeared in the African bush in the postwar years. Ben's son, Doniphan, fought in Vietnam, earned a medal but was permanently crippled.

The book is a patchwork of episodes from the three eras during which the Lears fought and searched and became aware of their own loss of purpose. Their different stages of disillusion are pieced together as the three in different circumstances experience the same eventual emptiness and despair.

The parts of the novel are more interesting than the whole, unfortunately. The action takes place in New Mexico, Texas and Mexico, and the local color is convincing. Two secondary characters, the priest, Father Paloma, and the newspaperman, Graf, effectively link the three Lear generations; they are the vehicles for much of the narration and for spates of ideas and philosophizing. But they share the tendency of the Lears to become mouthpieces for theories and thoughts rather than living characters. For one thing, the author doesn't manage to give them a recognizable tone of voice; they don't have consistency, an individual idiom.

The worst thing about this book is finishing it, the disappointment of the confirmation that one has made a tortuous journey only to arrive at an empty way station. The component parts haven't added up to a significant pattern. Father Paloma refers to the Lears' passion for soldiering as leaving them finally "all burned out." The supreme action, he says, is to survive. Doniphan does, but it's a negative triumph and a limp conclusion that leaves one feeling defrauded, as if one has followed a search only to be told flatly there was nothing to search for after all.

University Song Becomes Nonsexist

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania State University has a new, "nonsexist" version of its 75-year-old Alma Mater.

Recognizing that there are thousands of faithful students and alumnae who never "stood at boyhood's gate" and at no time were "molded into men," the university has revised the song.

The "boyhood's gate" mentioned in the song — "When we stood at boyhood's gate, shapeless in the hands of fate" — has been forever locked, replaced by the more equitable "childhood's gate."

And no longer will sons — and daughters — of Alma Mater proclaim in song: "Thou didst mold us, dear old State, into men, into men."

The words have been changed to read: "Thou didst mold us, dear old State, dear old State, dear old State."

The changes were approved by Dr. John W. Oswald, president of the university, with agreement from the Alumni Council and Executive Board of the Penn State Alumni Association

Judge refuses to block extradition of Garrison

GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP) — A federal judge refused Friday to block the extradition of Dr. Norman A. Garrison Jr. of Corinth to stand trial in Missouri in the slaying of his former wife.

U.S. District Court Judge William C. Keady ordered Garrison, 34, turned over to Missouri authorities to stand trial in the shooting and beating death of Lee Ann Garrison, whose body was found at her Kennett, Mo., home Sept. 8, 1974.

But the judge granted a 10-day stay before the order is executed to give Garrison's attorneys time to appeal. Garrison remains free on $100,000 bond and defense attorney John Farese Sr. of Ashland said he would appeal to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans.

In his 32-page opinion, Keady reviewed evidence presented during an earlier hearing and concluded that Garrison had failed to prove "beyond a reasonable doubt" that he was not in Missouri at the time of the slaying.

He said extradition was not intended as a preliminary inquiry into the merits of a c riminal prosecution but was simply a proceeding by which an accused person could be brought before the appropriate court for adjudication.

Keady cited court rulings saying a person sought through extradition should not be released unless it appeared beyond a reasonable doubt that he was outside the demanding state at the time of a c crime.

From a review of the evidence, "it is not possible to say with a certainty where the truth lies," Keady said. "We thus conclude that Garrison failed to sustain his burden on the issue of proving beyond a reasonable doubt his absence from the state of Missouri at the time of the alleged homicide."

The primary contention of Garrison's lawyers was that the state of Missouri had failed to produce evidence showing probable cause, or a statement of allegations against the physician.

But Keady held that Missouri had found probable cause for Garrison's arrest by its issuance of an arrest warrant.

Garrison contends that he was on a houseboat at Pickwick Lake in northeast Mississippi when his former wife was killed. During earlier state court proceedings, defense witnesses said they saw Garrison at the lake.

New Madrid R-1 CTA for change in retirement law

HOWARDVILLE — The Community Teachers Association of New Madrid County R-1 enlarged school district plans to take action for changes in the public school retirement law that will allow retirement at age 60, or after 30 years experience with maximum benefits.

The teachers Wednesday unanimously approved a motion, introduced by Mrs. Edith Dial of Portageville, "that the membership of the CTA authorize the executive board, with the aid of legal advice if necessary, to formulate a plan of action directed towards influencing legislation change in the public school retirement law. These changes should allow retirement, receiving maximum earned benefits, at age 60 or with minimum of 30 years of creditable experience."

Mrs. Dial told the teachers that the public school retirement system of Missouri, with a net worth of $736.5 million at the end of June 1975 and a projected balance of $840 million at the end of June this year, "could well afford an increase in retirement benefits."

She noted that the earned interest alone is more than the system is paying out in retirement allowances and benefits. Interest on securities amounted to $45 million, and retirement allowances and benefits expended were approximately $34 million. Operating expenses that included investment expenses amounted to $207,500 and actuarial fees and expenses totaled $16,500.

The total expenses, benefits and withdrawals, Mrs. Dial said, were more than paid for out of the interest, and the system "never spent the first penny of the school board contributions or teacher's contributions".

She called on the CTA teachers to vigorously work for the changes. She suggested that the teachers flood the state legislators with letters, send CTA delegates to Jefferson City or hire a lobbyist, and to seek support from other CTA groups, together with legal advice for this action.

Mrs. Dial referred to a 1.5 per cent increase in contributions to the system that will cost New Madrid County R-1 teachers $50,000 and the board of education $50,000, which she said could have gone for an increase in teachers' salaries.

President Jim Mauk reported that the CTA salary committee had recommended a $250 annual increase to the base salary and the school board had approved a $150 increase. Mauk said the board will continue the present teacher insurance and medical programs.

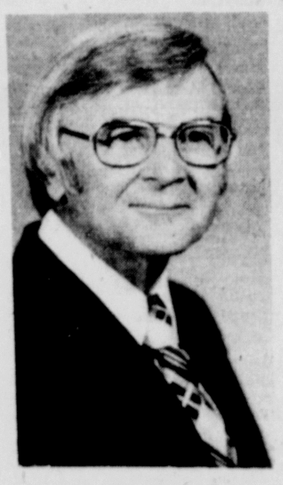
'Older people image'

By ARTHUR C. FULBRIGHT



The image of older persons in America is devastating and destructive. They are viewed as a drag on society - useless in a youth centered culture - a helpless anachronism in a world of rapid change.

Because the older persons are useless and nonproductive, in a world that measures worth by productivity, they are deviant, strangers to their land and their time by virtue of chronological age. So they are shelved, isolated, abandoned. Reading this societal image accurately, the older persons feel useless and worthless.

But that image, although widely held, is a myth that helps perpetuate the unconscionable rejection of those who built the foundation of our society. Older persons see that image reflected in the eyes of their friends, their children and shrivel in personality and social contributions. Society lives by this false image and thus helps to disengage our older men and women from any form of useful productivity.

This image of the useless, decrepit older person has long since been disproved in laboratories and in social interaction.. If older persons totter, it is only because they do not exercise or follow good nutritional programs. If they are dull it is only because they are expected to be dull and lack excitement in their lives and stimulation for their minds.

There is nothing in the aging process that decrees older persons have to be either weak or incompentent. So, if they are it is due to a lack of opportunity given them to invest the wisdom of their years in meaningful ways.

I sincerely believe that the last years of life are precisely for the intergration of previous experiences and wisdom, that is the best time for the investigation of the ultimate meanings of life!

In about 30 years, over half of all persons in the United States will be above 50 years of age. Therefore, we need to destroy myths about aging, and to make the last part of life a magnificent achievement in spiritual and social growth.

Solzhenitsyn Tells More About Russia's 'Cancer'

THE GULAG ARCHIPELAGO II. By Aleksandr I. Solzhenitsyn. Harper & Row. 712 Pages. $15.

Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn takes us once again into that land of horror, the island chain of labor camps that makes up his archipelago run by Gulag, the Central Labor Camp Administration of the Soviet Union under Lenin and Stalin. Stretching from one end of the country to the other, the labor camp islands, cut off from normal human society, formed the backbone of Soviet terrorism. The author estimated 66 million inmates died there in four decades.

Gulag II continues the tragic documentation of brutality and cruelty begun in Gulag I. The first volume introduced the labor camp system, its founding by Lenin, expansion by Stalin and procedures of arrest, interrogation and transport to the archipelago camps. Volume 2 now tells of life in the camps.

In numbing detail we are told of 'prisoners' grasping for meager rations of bread and thin nettle gruel, of exhausting labor on ill-conceived and often useless projects in bitter cold with inadequate tools, of the cruelty of the keepers, of filth and disease.

The tragic account is interspersed with the author's indignant judgments, bitter and sarcastic. At first this may strike the reader as shrill, but as the evidence unfolds the shrillness finds a justification.

Solzhenitsyn pictures the archipelago as a loathsome cancer that has poisoned the Soviet nation for two generations, causing citizens to suffer constant fear, mistrust of one another, corruption and lying as a way of life. He is hard on his fellow citizens, of whom he says: "There is no man who has typed even one page — without lying. There is no man who has spoken from a rostrum — without lying. There is no man who has spoken into a microphone — without lying."

"Peace of mind is something our citizens have never known," he observes, after describing the waves of persecution that sent millions, many of them innocent, into the camps. In any given year he estimates 10 to 15 million inhabited the archipelago.

Much of the material derives from the eight years Solzhenitsyn himself spent in the labor camps. Still more was gleaned from his contacts with other prisoners and tales that reached him later, as well as accounts published in the Soviet Union after Nikita Khrushchev began disbanding the camps following Stalin's death.

Gulag I and II are a monument to Solzhenitsyn's drive to tell the truth of a sordid chapter in human history.

Episodic Novel About A Family Of Soldiers

A TIME OF SOLDIERS. By Andrew Jolly. Dutton. 306 Pages. $8.95.

"A Time of Soldiers" is a discursive survey of three generations — grandfather, father, son — for whom soldiering was more than a career. It was a way of life, it was religion, patriotism and sex. It was a struggle of the soul in which, whether they survived or not, they were all defeated.

Capt. Jack Lear, cavalry officer, was assigned to train Mexican dissidents and died with them in mid-Depression times. His son, Ben, was a pilot in World War II, and disappeared in the African bush in the post-war years. Ben's son, Doniphan, fought in Vietnam, earned a medal but was permanently crippled.

The book is a patchwork of episodes from the three eras during which the Lears fought and searched and became aware of their own loss of purpose. Their different stages of disillusion are pieced together as the three in different circumstances experience the same eventual emptiness and despair.

The parts of the novel are more interesting than the whole, unfortunately. The action takes place in New Mexico, Texas and Mexico, and the local color is convincing. Two secondary characters, the priest, Father Paloma, and the newspaperman, Graf, effectively link the three Lear generations; they are the vehicles for much of the narration and for spates of ideas and philosophizing. But they share the tendency of the Lears to become mouthpieces for theories and thoughts rather than living characters. For one thing, the author doesn't manage to give them a recognizable tone of voice; they don't have consistency, an individual idiom.

The worst thing about this book is finishing it, the disappointment of the confirmation that one has made a tortuous journey only to arrive at an empty way station. The component parts haven't added up to a significant pattern. Father Paloma refers to the Lears' passion for soldiering as leaving them finally "all burned out." The supreme action, he says, is to survive. Doniphan does, but it's a negative triumph and a limp conclusion that leaves one feeling defrauded, as if one has followed a search only to be told flatly there was nothing to search for after all.

University Song Becomes Nonsexist

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania State University has a new, "nonsexist" version of its 75-year-old Alma Mater.

Recognizing that there are thousands of faithful students and alumnae who never "stood at boyhood's gate" and at no time were "molded into men," the university has revised the song.

The "boyhood's gate" mentioned in the song — "When we stood at boyhood's gate, shapeless in the hands of fate" — has been forever locked, replaced by the more equitable "childhood's gate."

And no longer will sons — and daughters — of Alma Mater proclaim in song: "Thou didst mold us, dear old State, into men, into men."

The words have been changed to read: "Thou didst mold us, dear old State, dear old State, dear old State."

The changes were approved by Dr. John W. Oswald, president of the university, with agreement from the Alumni Council and Executive Board of the Penn State Alumni Association

Hearnes files suit for inquiry data

SPRINGFIELD — Former Gov.Warren E. Hearnes demanded that the federal government "put up or shut up" as he announced here that he had filed suit against the Department of Justice seeking records to determine "who and what" are behind the government's lengthy investigation of him.

Hearnes also charged that the federal government is endangering "our democratic process" and his campaign for U.S. senator "by irresponsible and unjustified actions of federal prosecutors."

Attorneys for Hearnes filed the suit Friday in U.S. District Court in St. Louis shortly before Hearnes held a press conference here, as Missouri Democrats began gathering for their annual Jackson Day event.

The suit was filed under the Freedom of Information Act. Hearnes is asking for all records from U. S. Attorney Bert C. Hurn in Kansas City that relate to the government's nearly four-year investigation. Hearnes was governor from 1965 to 1973.

Hearnes also revealed that he had requested a personal conference with U.S. Attorney General Edward H. Levi, but the request had been turned down.

"The filing of the lawsuit is but another round in my fight against the flagrant abuse of governmental authority to which I have been subjected for so long," Hearnes said.

"I believe that the people of Missouri are entitled to have this matter resolved once and for all ... after four years of harassment it is time for the federal government to put up or shut up."

Hearnes said it was just a year ago that Hurn called Hearnes "one of the most honest public officials that he had encountered."

Hearnes had appeared before the Kansas City federal grand jury for three consecutive days in april 1975, after which he was cleared of any wrong doing up to that point. Last month, the Internal Revenue Service's criminal intelligence division, after an 18-month inquiry, said it could find no criminal wrongdoing by Hearnes and dropped its investigation.

However, Hurn won't issue a public statement that the investigation is over and talks in riddles, according to Hearnes. Hurn has been ordered by the Justice Department "to resolve what is unresolved" in the investigation as quickly as possible.

Hearnes's press conference on the eve of the big Democratic rally here pointed toward the confrontation of the four major candidates vying for the Democratic nomination for U.S. senator.

The banquet Saturday night was a testimonial to the man who made that race possible, U.S. Sen. Stuart Symington, who is calling it quits after 24 years in the Senate and after b eing one of the state's biggest vote-getters.

In addition to Hearnes, the other major contenders for symington's seat are U.S. Reps. James W. Symington ofSt. Louis and Jerry Litton of Chillicothe and Kansas City Mayor Charles B. Wheeler Jr. All will be here for the weekend of politicing and frolicking.

The competition was entirely for delegates, with no popular vote test among the presidential contenders. Republicans were electing 96, Democrats 98.

The delegate candidates were listed on the ballot with the presidential candidates they favored. In the delegate competition, Reagan's leading vote-getters were polling about 64 per cent of the ballots.

The top Carter entries in the delegate competition were capturing nearly half the vote. Bentsen slates had about 24 per cent, and delegates pledged to Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace about 18 per cent. But popular vote didn't count, and none of the Wallace delegates were leading.

Rep. Alan Steelman, 34, of Dallas, won the Republican Senate nomination.

3 suspects are boked for Greenville slayings

ST. LOUIS — Three South St. Louisans have been booked in connection with the slaying of two men and the robbery of the Cow Shed tavern Wednesday in Greenville.

Suspected of armed robbery and murder, the men charged are Guy Lester Burroughs, 29, of the 4100 block of De Tonty St.; Howard Hulstine, 32, of the 3900 block of Botanical Ave., and Roger Lynn Winningham, 19, of the 3900 block of Shaw Ave., police said.

After an informant called the homicide division Thursday night and mentioned the names of the three men in connection with an unspecified shooting, detectives recovered an automobile in Arnold that was used in the holdup, authorities reported.

After special investigators from the Missouri State Highway Patrol were called to St. Louis to help investigate the crime, the three suspects were arrested at their homes between 4 a.m. and 7:15 a.m. Friday, police said. Detectives were searching for the murder weapon Friday afternoon, authorities reported.

The bodies of bartender Carl Fancher, 41, and James Baker, 56, a retired merchant marine who lived at the Cow Shed motel, were found early Wednesday. Fancher's body, shot four times in the head, twice in the back, once in the shoulder and once in the hand, was found near the tavern door, authorities said.

Baker's body, shot twice in the head apparently beaten, was discovered along Highway 67 about three miles north of Greenville, authorities said.

About $250 had been taken from the cash register at the Cow Shed tavern, police reported. The part-owner of the bar, Don Twidwell, had said the killers were probably on their way to St. Louis when they stopped at Greenville, about 120 miles south of St. Louis.

Both burroughs and Hulstine are ex-convicts, records show, Burroughs pleaded guilty in 1974 to attempted robbery and carrying a concealed weapon for his part in the February, 1974, attempt holdup of the Jefferson Bank & Trust Co., 2600 Washington Ave. He was sentenced to five years imprisonment.

Hulstine, originally of Modesto, Calif., was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment in 1970 after he was convicted of assault with intent to kill in the kidnpaing and shooting of a Jefferson County man in October, 1968.

Convertible era ends

DETROIT (AP) — With all the hoopla that traditionally accompanies the introduction of a new model, the last U.S.-built convertible rolled off the assembly line Wednesday, ending a 74-year era of American ragtops, of cruising down the avenue with the wind whipping through your hair.

"Like the running board and the rumble seat, the convertible is an item which history has passed by," Cadillac General Manager Edward C. Kennard said.

The $11,049 white Cadillac Eldorado, piloted by Kennard, was the 200th "Last of the Convertibles" built by Cadillac. The car is to be kept by General Motors "for historical purposes," he said.

The other 199 — each emblazoned with a plaque saying, "This 1976 Fleetwood Eldorado is one of the last 200 identical U.S. convertibles produced" — have been sold in a lottery among Cadillac's 1,600 dealerships.

Kennard, accompanied in the front seat by Detroit Mayor Coleman Young and H. B. Brawner, Cadillac general manufacturing manager, wheeled the car off the line amid balloons, banners and employes dressed in jackets and T-shirts proclaiming they worked on the last soft top.

Several hundred production and office workers at the Cadillac complex cheered as the car's engine roared to life and the vehicle crept a few feet under its own power.

"It's great to be part of history, especially since the car will be going to a museum," said Ray Mikula, a production line worker who installed the hood on the final convertible. Other workers agreed. Some just shrugged their shoulders.

After reaching a zenith in popularity after World War II, the appeal of convertibles began eroding in the mid-60s. Air conditioning, fast freeway driving, and federal rollover safety standards contributed to its demise, industry officials say.

American Motors dropped them in 1960 followed by Chrysler in 1971 and Ford Motor Company in 1973. GM's Chevrolet, Pontiac, Buick and Oldsmobile divisions phased them out in the 1975 model year, leaving only Cadillac buyers with the option of a soft roof.

Production was limited to 14,000 this year because the makers of the folding tops went out of business and Cadillac bought the remaining stock.

"If we had enough tops to make 20,000 we could have sold them," Kennard said.

His prediction early this year that the final soft-tops would become "collector's items" is apparently coming true. Some leaders have offered to pay as much as $2,000 over cost for the vehicles

Security analysts pass the word

'Glad rags' likely to aid economy

By CROCKETT SCOTT

"Gold lace has a charm for the fair."

...Sir William Schwenck Gilbert

Textile and women's apparel equities are likely candidates for appreciation in a recovering economy.

The word comes from Securities and Exchange Commission — registered security analysts in Chicago, Indianapolis and Kansas City.

You hear favorable mention about textile producers like Dan River, Burlington and Springs Mills and garment makers such as Russ Togs, Aileen, Bodin and Bobbie Brooks.

Such equities still are very much in buying range, note the analysts.

And they reason further that with new home construction out of range, pricewise, for a great number of Americans, there may be added motivation to "blow" surplus dollars on "glad rags."

Particularly is this true of the working girl; and younger matrons who are working. "So many of these families are content with an apartment, or a mobile home," notes a Chicago customers' man. "And both the wife and the husband are dressing better as a consequence."

The many new colors and styles coming up for fall, the rising demand for Calcutta cloth and the continuing demand -- thus far at least -- for denims should make for a strong second half in textiles, note the analysts.

Both textile producers and apparel makers have had some sparse quarters in volume and profits during the past 18 months to two years. Dan River has been in deficit. Yet its highly leveraged shares, note some SEC-registered analysts, could provide for a sharp upturn in profits.

The stock trades around 10; up from a 1975 low of 4¼, but far below a top level of near 40 a few years ago.

Dan River has traded in a low pattern for several years, it is noted, and the time may be near for a breakout.

Burlington, largest firm in textiles, has moved through flat earnings periods, but should benefit from its diversity in a period of rising economy.

The stock is selling currently just under 30; with the recent range gyrating from a low of 8 to a high in the low 50's.

Springs Mills, a firm noted for humorous advertising and enduring strength over the years as a famed maker of sheets and other textile products, could do well in coming months, say the analysts.

There are many customers of the firm who remember the subtle touch; in its ads placed there by its late guiding genius, Elliott White Springs, the famed World War I flying ace and author.

Like other textile firms, Springs Mills has had to contend with a feast or famine existence. The stock currently sells around 14-15 after a recent year high was 26.

Analysts who have looked at some of the mills and women's apparel producers mention Russ Togs at this time in the latter category.

Russ Togs products are well known across the nation. The stock has sold as high as 48 only a few years ago, in contrast to the present trading around 12-13 as this is written. The low last year was 7.

Like other women's garment equities and the textiles, Russ Togs is a speculation, note SEC-registered analysts, but a speculation with near-term upside potential.

These are stocks to be considered a trading vehicle, note the analysts; an area in which to buy in and to move out of in a few months, hopefully with a profit.

Aileen, another well-known brand in women's apparel and a famous maker of sports and casual wear, has been a castoff (so far as investors are concerned) for several years, and as such, the stock sells at a depressed level, around 4, in contrast to a high of 24-25 during the late 1960's and early 1970's.

Bodin and Bobbie Brooks also are believed in buying range, according to a number of SEC-registered analysts.

Insurance is on the rise

Director lists types of health policies

By ALFRED C. SIKES
Director of consumer affairs

JEFFERSON CITY — Ask a financial counselor what's the most difficult purchase a consumer can make and he probably will say health insurance. Ask your neighbor what his health insurance policy covers, and he probably will say everything. That is a common misbelief.

Most consumers fail the test when it comes to buying health insurance. Many don't buy adequate coverage and most don't know what they're buying.

Take the woman whose health insurance policy contained a clause that maternity benefits will not be awarded for birth that occurs within 10 months after the policy is purchased. When her baby was born before the end of the 10-month period, she was angry that the company would not pay her hospital bills. She was not aware of the 10-month period.

With the cost of maintaining your health rapidly rising, the need for health insurance is no longer a question. The problem now is knowing what to look for in a policy. Following are some of the types of health policies:

—Hospital expense insurance pays toward the cost of the hospital bills such as room and board, routine nursing care, laboratory tests, medication and medical supplies provided in a hospital. It may pay up to a maximum number of days in the hospital or it may pay a certain percentage of the bill for your entire stay or it may pay a flat rate for certain services. The more coverage you have, the higher the premiums.

—Surgical expense insurance helps pay the physician's fees for operations. Again, you should note how much of the fee the company will pay for a particular kind of surgery.

—Medical expense insurance helps pay the doctor for services other than surgery such as visits to you while hospital confined.

—Major medical insurance provides benefits for long-term illness and supplementary benefits that would not be covered under your regular hospital plan.

—Disability income insurance provides an income if you are unable to perform the duties of your occupation because of illness or injury.

There are certain policy provisions you should note as you shop for a health policy. A good policy should nothave a long list of exclusions, but most will have some. Be sure you are aware of what the policy does and does not cover.

Most health policies provide that the company will not pay for pre-existing conditions. The company may refuse a claim for treatment of an illness that was present when you purchased the policy. Exclusion periods vary. The shorter the period, the better for you. Try to avoid policies with an exclusion of longer than one year.

Check the length of the waiting period required after the purchase of the policy and before you can file a claim for sickness. Again, the shorter the wait, the better.

You should also note the renewability of your insurance contract. A guaranteed renewable policy cannot be canceled, but the company can raise rates at its discretion for a class of policyholders with the same type of policy. An optionally renewable policy can be changed in its coverage or canceled by the company whenever the policy is due for renewal.

The definition of disability should also be made clear in the policy. Compare the policies' length of payment while you are unable to perform your present occupation. The definition of total disability should read: "Your occupation for one year and thereafter, any occupation for which you are fitted by education, training or experience."

Premiums for health insurance vary greatly. Compare insurance companies' premiums as well as rates for individual coverage.

If you have any questions about a health insurance policy, contact the Missouri Division of Insurance, 515 E. High St., Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Business news in brief

Announces earnings

CINCINNATI, — The Procter & Gamble Company today announced sales and earnings for the first nine months of its current fiscal year and for the three-month period ended March 31, 1976.

Net earnings for the first nine months of the fiscal year amounted to $314,900,000, an increase of 17 per cent over net earnings of $268,862,000 for the same period a year ago. Earnings per share were $3.82 compared with $3.26 for the previous period. Worldwide net sales were $4,864,744,000, an increase of 6 per cent over sales of $4,574,028,000 for the first nine months a year earlier.

For the January-March period -- the third quarter of P&G's fiscal year -- net earnings amounted to $122,992,000, an increase of 29 per cent over net earnings of $95,448,000 in the same three months a year ago. Earnings per share were $1.49 compared with $1.15 for the same period last year. Worldwide net sales were $1,736,830,000, an increase of 9 per cent over sales of $1,587,809,000 in the same period last year.

Earnings and earnings per share for the two periods a year ago have been restated to include the effect of the extension of the last-in first out (LIFO) inventory accounting method.

Board Chairman Edward G. Harness and President John G. Smale told shareholders that the third quarter earnings improvement was a result of higher unit volume as well as some recovery in profit margin levels.

"We believe that the nine-month figures are the more reasonable reflection of the recent state of the business," they said.

Colley attends seminar

The National Association of Life Underwriters has announced that Sikeston Life Insurance Agent Lynn A. Colley, 916 Alexander St., has returned from Memphis, Tenn., where he attended the annual seninar for education chairmen of local life insurance associations.

Colley was among 38 chairmen from Missouri, Kansas, Illinois, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana in Attendance at the seminar.

Sponsored by the Life Underwriter Training Council in Washington, D.C., the seminar served to acquaint the chairman with changes in the LUTC training program and to prepare them for establishing classes in their home localities.

Founded in 1948, the Life Underwriter Training Council sponsors and conducts classes for insurance men in some 1,000 cities and for over 25,000 students nationwide. The classes are two-year sessions and cover almost all facets of the life insurance business.

Colley is secretary- treasurer of the Sikeston Association of Life Underwriters and is an agent for Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., a position he has held since 1968.

The Sikeston association is currently sponsoring a LUTC class and expects to have 13 students graduate from part one in May.

Firms to merge

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A merger between First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Southeast Missouri and Ste. Genevieve Savings & Loan Association is being negotiated by the officials of the two association.

Announcement of the merger negotiations was made by Paul R. Williams, executive vice president of First Federal Savings & Loan after both boards of directors had passed the appropriate merger resolutions.

According to Williams, the merger will be beneficial to both associations and the communities they serve. Total assets of Ste. Genevieve Savings & Loan Association are approximately $10 million. First Federal's assets exceed $143 million.

Montana's basketball team features Michael John Richardson and Michael Ray Richardson. Both come from Denver but they are not related.

Bicentennial look at Bell telephone

Troubleshooters lived by twelve commandments

The Bicentennial urges a review of the past to identify reasons why our society has progressed to this point, as well as guidelines for continued progress.

In the early days of the telephone business, phone company troubleshooters were instructed to live by 12 commandments for neatness and public acceptance that began with some good horse sense. In 1911, they read:

— "Treat everybody as you like to be treated, not forgetting your horse. If you want to know the horse's side of it, just take off your coat and hat some day, hitch yourself to the same post with your belt, and stand there about two hours. Hereafter, don't forget his blanket.

— "Put up a 'good front'. It is not necessary to advertise any tailor shop, neither is it necessary to go about your work looking like a coal heaver. Overalls can look as respectable as anything else, but they must at least show that they are on speaking terms with the laundryman; and your shoes must have a bowing acquaintance with the bootblack.

— "Make the liveryman wash and oil your wagon and harness, and do not tie the harness up with wire longer than is necessary to get proper repairs. The same may be said of your suspenders and buttons.

— "Keep all unnecessary junk out of your wagon.

—"Don't pitch dry batteries into the bed of your wagon to be hauled around day after day with broken glass, bolts, wire, pole steps and what not. Don't neglect to memorize the fact that the supply houses are not running charitable institutions for the benefit of the company.

—"Go about your business cheerfully and quietly. When you enter a residence, don't overlook the footmat. If requested to go around to the back door, don't consider yourself insulted, but try to realize that the lady of the house may not have a maid, and is only trying to save work for herself. Say 'good morning' or 'evening.' It doesn't cost anything and shows you started out right at home.

—"If compelled to do anything that makes litter, ask for a newspapr to catch the trash. The lady of the house will be grateful.

—"Close the door when you go out, not forgetting to shut the front gate.

— "When you leave be sure to have looked over everything carefully and have anticipated, as far as possible, some future trouble.

Company reports can opener defect

KANSAS CITY — Dazey Products Co. has reported to the Consumer Product Safety Commission a possible defect in the cutting blade on three models of electric can openers it manufactured last October.

A company spokesman said that the units may have a defective cutting blade which creates metal shavings that may drop into food and be ingested by the consumer.

Dazey said that approximately 32,000 units have been sold to consumers. Of these, some 4,500 may have the defective cutter.

The models involved can be identified under the brand names of Dazy or Sears, Roebuck & Co. The Dazey units were distributed primarily in the South, Southwest and lower Midwest through TG&Y and Central Hardware. Sears units were sold nationally both in retail stores and catalog sales.

Only those units with the production date coding of 10 75 stamped on the bottom of the housing have the potentially defective cutter. Also located on the bottom housing are the model numbers. The Dazey model number involved is 671H. Sears model numbers involved are 259.838100 and 259.838300.

The company spokesman said the removable cutting lever should be taken off the can opener and returned to the place of purchase for free replacement. Levers from Sears models can be taken to the nearest Sears store.

Benefit show to be given for Hargraves

BERNIE — The Bootheel Jamboree, a country and western music theater here, will present a benefit performance at 8 p.m. Thursday for Brenda Mekan Hargraves, a young Bernie woman who has only recently revived from a coma in her more than three-year fight for life after a near fatal traffic accident.

The benefit show proceeds will be used to help pay immense medical bills accumulated by Mrs. Hargraves, a 24-year-old wife and mother who spent three years and two months in a coma after being involved in a head-on collision.

Now out of the coma, she is starting to feel and sense the outside world again and is able to sit in a wheelchair some almost every day and occasionally goes for a short car ride, but the road to recovery still promises to be long and expensive.

Mrs. Hargraves' mother, Mrs. Billy Joe Mekan, has taken care of her and her little girl since the disabling accident, giving up her job to do so.

Tickets for the benefit show may be reserved by calling telephone number 293-5544.

Jolly boys were troubleshooters

Ma Bell's early 20th century troubleshooters lived by 12 commandments which called for clean, but less than formal, attire and urged them to "hand out a little jolly."

Hearnes files suit for inquiry data

SPRINGFIELD — Former Gov.Warren E. Hearnes demanded that the federal government "put up or shut up" as he announced here that he had filed suit against the Department of Justice seeking records to determine "who and what" are behind the government's lengthy investigation of him.

Hearnes also charged that the federal government is endangering "our democratic process" and his campaign for U.S. senator "by irresponsible and unjustified actions of federal prosecutors."

Attorneys for Hearnes filed the suit Friday in U.S. District Court in St. Louis shortly before Hearnes held a press conference here, as Missouri Democrats began gathering for their annual Jackson Day event.

The suit was filed under the Freedom of Information Act. Hearnes is asking for all records from U. S. Attorney Bert C. Hurn in Kansas City that relate to the government's nearly four-year investigation. Hearnes was governor from 1965 to 1973.

Hearnes also revealed that he had requested a personal conference with U.S. Attorney General Edward H. Levi, but the request had been turned down.

"The filing of the lawsuit is but another round in my fight against the flagrant abuse of governmental authority to which I have been subjected for so long," Hearnes said.

"I believe that the people of Missouri are entitled to have this matter resolved once and for all ... after four years of harassment it is time for the federal government to put up or shut up."

Hearnes said it was just a year ago that Hurn called Hearnes "one of the most honest public officials that he had encountered."

Hearnes had appeared before the Kansas City federal grand jury for three consecutive days in april 1975, after which he was cleared of any wrong doing up to that point. Last month, the Internal Revenue Service's criminal intelligence division, after an 18-month inquiry, said it could find no criminal wrongdoing by Hearnes and dropped its investigation.

However, Hurn won't issue a public statement that the investigation is over and talks in riddles, according to Hearnes. Hurn has been ordered by the Justice Department "to resolve what is unresolved" in the investigation as quickly as possible.

Hearnes's press conference on the eve of the big Democratic rally here pointed toward the confrontation of the four major candidates vying for the Democratic nomination for U.S. senator.

The banquet Saturday night was a testimonial to the man who made that race possible, U.S. Sen. Stuart Symington, who is calling it quits after 24 years in the Senate and after b eing one of the state's biggest vote-getters.

In addition to Hearnes, the other major contenders for symington's seat are U.S. Reps. James W. Symington ofSt. Louis and Jerry Litton of Chillicothe and Kansas City Mayor Charles B. Wheeler Jr. All will be here for the weekend of politicing and frolicking.

The competition was entirely for delegates, with no popular vote test among the presidential contenders. Republicans were electing 96, Democrats 98.

The delegate candidates were listed on the ballot with the presidential candidates they favored. In the delegate competition, Reagan's leading vote-getters were polling about 64 per cent of the ballots.

The top Carter entries in the delegate competition were capturing nearly half the vote. Bentsen slates had about 24 per cent, and delegates pledged to Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace about 18 per cent. But popular vote didn't count, and none of the Wallace delegates were leading.

Rep. Alan Steelman, 34, of Dallas, won the Republican Senate nomination.

3 suspects are boked for Greenville slayings

ST. LOUIS — Three South St. Louisans have been booked in connection with the slaying of two men and the robbery of the Cow Shed tavern Wednesday in Greenville.

Suspected of armed robbery and murder, the men charged are Guy Lester Burroughs, 29, of the 4100 block of De Tonty St.; Howard Hulstine, 32, of the 3900 block of Botanical Ave., and Roger Lynn Winningham, 19, of the 3900 block of Shaw Ave., police said.

After an informant called the homicide division Thursday night and mentioned the names of the three men in connection with an unspecified shooting, detectives recovered an automobile in Arnold that was used in the holdup, authorities reported.

After special investigators from the Missouri State Highway Patrol were called to St. Louis to help investigate the crime, the three suspects were arrested at their homes between 4 a.m. and 7:15 a.m. Friday, police said. Detectives were searching for the murder weapon Friday afternoon, authorities reported.

The bodies of bartender Carl Fancher, 41, and James Baker, 56, a retired merchant marine who lived at the Cow Shed motel, were found early Wednesday. Fancher's body, shot four times in the head, twice in the back, once in the shoulder and once in the hand, was found near the tavern door, authorities said.

Baker's body, shot twice in the head apparently beaten, was discovered along Highway 67 about three miles north of Greenville, authorities said.

About $250 had been taken from the cash register at the Cow Shed tavern, police reported. The part-owner of the bar, Don Twidwell, had said the killers were probably on their way to St. Louis when they stopped at Greenville, about 120 miles south of St. Louis.

Both burroughs and Hulstine are ex-convicts, records show, Burroughs pleaded guilty in 1974 to attempted robbery and carrying a concealed weapon for his part in the February, 1974, attempt holdup of the Jefferson Bank & Trust Co., 2600 Washington Ave. He was sentenced to five years imprisonment.

Hulstine, originally of Modesto, Calif., was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment in 1970 after he was convicted of assault with intent to kill in the kidnpaing and shooting of a Jefferson County man in October, 1968.

Convertible era ends

DETROIT (AP) — With all the hoopla that traditionally accompanies the introduction of a new model, the last U.S.-built convertible rolled off the assembly line Wednesday, ending a 74-year era of American ragtops, of cruising down the avenue with the wind whipping through your hair.

"Like the running board and the rumble seat, the convertible is an item which history has passed by," Cadillac General Manager Edward C. Kennard said.

The $11,049 white Cadillac Eldorado, piloted by Kennard, was the 200th "Last of the Convertibles" built by Cadillac. The car is to be kept by General Motors "for historical purposes," he said.

The other 199 — each emblazoned with a plaque saying, "This 1976 Fleetwood Eldorado is one of the last 200 identical U.S. convertibles produced" — have been sold in a lottery among Cadillac's 1,600 dealerships.

Kennard, accompanied in the front seat by Detroit Mayor Coleman Young and H. B. Brawner, Cadillac general manufacturing manager, wheeled the car off the line amid balloons, banners and employes dressed in jackets and T-shirts proclaiming they worked on the last soft top.

Several hundred production and office workers at the Cadillac complex cheered as the car's engine roared to life and the vehicle crept a few feet under its own power.

"It's great to be part of history, especially since the car will be going to a museum," said Ray Mikula, a production line worker who installed the hood on the final convertible. Other workers agreed. Some just shrugged their shoulders.

After reaching a zenith in popularity after World War II, the appeal of convertibles began eroding in the mid-60s. Air conditioning, fast freeway driving, and federal rollover safety standards contributed to its demise, industry officials say.

American Motors dropped them in 1960 followed by Chrysler in 1971 and Ford Motor Company in 1973. GM's Chevrolet, Pontiac, Buick and Oldsmobile divisions phased them out in the 1975 model year, leaving only Cadillac buyers with the option of a soft roof.

Production was limited to 14,000 this year because the makers of the folding tops went out of business and Cadillac bought the remaining stock.

"If we had enough tops to make 20,000 we could have sold them," Kennard said.

His prediction early this year that the final soft-tops would become "collector's items" is apparently coming true. Some leaders have offered to pay as much as $2,000 over cost for the vehicles

Security analysts pass the word

'Glad rags' likely to aid economy

By CROCKETT SCOTT

"Gold lace has a charm for the fair."

...Sir William Schwenck Gilbert

Textile and women's apparel equities are likely candidates for appreciation in a recovering economy.

The word comes from Securities and Exchange Commission — registered security analysts in Chicago, Indianapolis and Kansas City.

You hear favorable mention about textile producers like Dan River, Burlington and Springs Mills and garment makers such as Russ Togs, Aileen, Bodin and Bobbie Brooks.

Such equities still are very much in buying range, note the analysts.

And they reason further that with new home construction out of range, pricewise, for a great number of Americans, there may be added motivation to "blow" surplus dollars on "glad rags."

Particularly is this true of the working girl; and younger matrons who are working. "So many of these families are content with an apartment, or a mobile home," notes a Chicago customers' man. "And both the wife and the husband are dressing better as a consequence."

The many new colors and styles coming up for fall, the rising demand for Calcutta cloth and the continuing demand -- thus far at least -- for denims should make for a strong second half in textiles, note the analysts.

Both textile producers and apparel makers have had some sparse quarters in volume and profits during the past 18 months to two years. Dan River has been in deficit. Yet its highly leveraged shares, note some SEC-registered analysts, could provide for a sharp upturn in profits.

The stock trades around 10; up from a 1975 low of 4¼, but far below a top level of near 40 a few years ago.

Dan River has traded in a low pattern for several years, it is noted, and the time may be near for a breakout.

Burlington, largest firm in textiles, has moved through flat earnings periods, but should benefit from its diversity in a period of rising economy.

The stock is selling currently just under 30; with the recent range gyrating from a low of 8 to a high in the low 50's.

Springs Mills, a firm noted for humorous advertising and enduring strength over the years as a famed maker of sheets and other textile products, could do well in coming months, say the analysts.

There are many customers of the firm who remember the subtle touch; in its ads placed there by its late guiding genius, Elliott White Springs, the famed World War I flying ace and author.

Like other textile firms, Springs Mills has had to contend with a feast or famine existence. The stock currently sells around 14-15 after a recent year high was 26.

Analysts who have looked at some of the mills and women's apparel producers mention Russ Togs at this time in the latter category.

Russ Togs products are well known across the nation. The stock has sold as high as 48 only a few years ago, in contrast to the present trading around 12-13 as this is written. The low last year was 7.

Like other women's garment equities and the textiles, Russ Togs is a speculation, note SEC-registered analysts, but a speculation with near-term upside potential.

These are stocks to be considered a trading vehicle, note the analysts; an area in which to buy in and to move out of in a few months, hopefully with a profit.

Aileen, another well-known brand in women's apparel and a famous maker of sports and casual wear, has been a castoff (so far as investors are concerned) for several years, and as such, the stock sells at a depressed level, around 4, in contrast to a high of 24-25 during the late 1960's and early 1970's.

Bodin and Bobbie Brooks also are believed in buying range, according to a number of SEC-registered analysts.

Insurance is on the rise

Director lists types of health policies

By ALFRED C. SIKES
Director of consumer affairs

JEFFERSON CITY — Ask a financial counselor what's the most difficult purchase a consumer can make and he probably will say health insurance. Ask your neighbor what his health insurance policy covers, and he probably will say everything. That is a common misbelief.

Most consumers fail the test when it comes to buying health insurance. Many don't buy adequate coverage and most don't know what they're buying.

Take the woman whose health insurance policy contained a clause that maternity benefits will not be awarded for birth that occurs within 10 months after the policy is purchased. When her baby was born before the end of the 10-month period, she was angry that the company would not pay her hospital bills. She was not aware of the 10-month period.

With the cost of maintaining your health rapidly rising, the need for health insurance is no longer a question. The problem now is knowing what to look for in a policy. Following are some of the types of health policies:

—Hospital expense insurance pays toward the cost of the hospital bills such as room and board, routine nursing care, laboratory tests, medication and medical supplies provided in a hospital. It may pay up to a maximum number of days in the hospital or it may pay a certain percentage of the bill for your entire stay or it may pay a flat rate for certain services. The more coverage you have, the higher the premiums.

—Surgical expense insurance helps pay the physician's fees for operations. Again, you should note how much of the fee the company will pay for a particular kind of surgery.

—Medical expense insurance helps pay the doctor for services other than surgery such as visits to you while hospital confined.

—Major medical insurance provides benefits for long-term illness and supplementary benefits that would not be covered under your regular hospital plan.

—Disability income insurance provides an income if you are unable to perform the duties of your occupation because of illness or injury.

There are certain policy provisions you should note as you shop for a health policy. A good policy should nothave a long list of exclusions, but most will have some. Be sure you are aware of what the policy does and does not cover.

Most health policies provide that the company will not pay for pre-existing conditions. The company may refuse a claim for treatment of an illness that was present when you purchased the policy. Exclusion periods vary. The shorter the period, the better for you. Try to avoid policies with an exclusion of longer than one year.

Check the length of the waiting period required after the purchase of the policy and before you can file a claim for sickness. Again, the shorter the wait, the better.

You should also note the renewability of your insurance contract. A guaranteed renewable policy cannot be canceled, but the company can raise rates at its discretion for a class of policyholders with the same type of policy. An optionally renewable policy can be changed in its coverage or canceled by the company whenever the policy is due for renewal.

The definition of disability should also be made clear in the policy. Compare the policies' length of payment while you are unable to perform your present occupation. The definition of total disability should read: "Your occupation for one year and thereafter, any occupation for which you are fitted by education, training or experience."

Premiums for health insurance vary greatly. Compare insurance companies' premiums as well as rates for individual coverage.

If you have any questions about a health insurance policy, contact the Missouri Division of Insurance, 515 E. High St., Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Earnings per share were $3.82 compared with $3.26 for the previous period. Worldwide net sales were $4,864,744,000, an increase of 6 per cent over sales of $4,574,028,000 for the first nine months a year earlier.

For the January-March period -- the third quarter of P&G's fiscal year -- net earnings amounted to $122,992,000, an increase of 29 per cent over net earnings of $95,448,000 in the same three months a year ago. Earnings per share were $1.49 compared with $1.15 for the same period last year. Worldwide net sales were $1,736,830,000, an increase of 9 per cent over sales of $1,587,809,000 in the same period last year.

Earnings and earnings per share for the two periods a year ago have been restated to include the effect of the extension of the last-in first out (LIFO) inventory accounting method.

Board Chairman Edward G. Harness and President John G. Smale told shareholders that the third quarter earnings improvement was a result of higher unit volume as well as some recovery in profit margin levels.

"We believe that the nine-month figures are the more reasonable reflection of the recent state of the business," they said.

Bicentennial look at Bell telephone

Troubleshooters lived by twelve commandments

The Bicentennial urges a review of the past to identify reasons why our society has progressed to this point, as well as guidelines for continued progress.

In the early days of the telephone business, phone company troubleshooters were instructed to live by 12 commandments for neatness and public acceptance that began with some good horse sense. In 1911, they read:

— "Treat everybody as you like to be treated, not forgetting your horse. If you want to know the horse's side of it, just take off your coat and hat some day, hitch yourself to the same post with your belt, and stand there about two hours. Hereafter, don't forget his blanket.

— "Put up a 'good front'. It is not necessary to advertise any tailor shop, neither is it necessary to go about your work looking like a coal heaver. Overalls can look as respectable as anything else, but they must at least show that they are on speaking terms with the laundryman; and your shoes must have a bowing acquaintance with the bootblack.

— "Make the liveryman wash and oil your wagon and harness, and do not tie the harness up with wire longer than is necessary to get proper repairs. The same may be said of your suspenders and buttons.

— "Keep all unnecessary junk out of your wagon.

—"Don't pitch dry batteries into the bed of your wagon to be hauled around day after day with broken glass, bolts, wire, pole steps and what not. Don't neglect to memorize the fact that the supply houses are not running charitable institutions for the benefit of the company.

—"Go about your business cheerfully and quietly. When you enter a residence, don't overlook the footmat. If requested to go around to the back door, don't consider yourself insulted, but try to realize that the lady of the house may not have a maid, and is only trying to save work for herself. Say 'good morning' or 'evening.' It doesn't cost anything and shows you started out right at home.

—"If compelled to do anything that makes litter, ask for a newspapr to catch the trash. The lady of the house will be grateful.

—"Close the door when you go out, not forgetting to shut the front gate.

— "When you leave be sure to have looked over everything carefully and have anticipated, as far as possible, some future trouble.

"It is not necessary to tell the lady of the house that her telephone is worn out and no good. She may think so much herself. Tell her that her telephone is as good as anybody's and back it up by making it so.

— "If you ever believe that a subscriber is a crank, forget it. All of them are wise enough to tell whan a telephone is not working right. Not every troubleman can do this.

— "Be courteous and polite and don't be afraid to hand out a little jolly occasionally. It doesn't hurt anybody's feelings to be jollied a little."

Company reports can opener defect

KANSAS CITY — Dazey Products Co. has reported to the Consumer Product Safety Commission a possible defect in the cutting blade on three models of electric can openers it manufactured last October.

A company spokesman said that the units may have a defective cutting blade which creates metal shavings that may drop into food and be ingested by the consumer.

Dazey said that approximately 32,000 units have been sold to consumers. Of these, some 4,500 may have the defective cutter.

The models involved can be identified under the brand names of Dazy or Sears, Roebuck & Co. The Dazey units were distributed primarily in the South, Southwest and lower Midwest through TG&Y and Central Hardware. Sears units were sold nationally both in retail stores and catalog sales.

Only those units with the production date coding of 10 75 stamped on the bottom of the housing have the potentially defective cutter. Also located on the bottom housing are the model numbers. The Dazey model number involved is 671H. Sears model numbers involved are 259.838100 and 259.838300.

The company spokesman said the removable cutting lever should be taken off the can opener and returned to the place of purchase for free replacement. Levers from Sears models can be taken to the nearest Sears store.

Benefit show to be given for Hargraves

BERNIE — The Bootheel Jamboree, a country and western music theater here, will present a benefit performance at 8 p.m. Thursday for Brenda Mekan Hargraves, a young Bernie woman who has only recently revived from a coma in her more than three-year fight for life after a near fatal traffic accident.

The benefit show proceeds will be used to help pay immense medical bills accumulated by Mrs. Hargraves, a 24-year-old wife and mother who spent three years and two months in a coma after being involved in a head-on collision.

Now out of the coma, she is starting to feel and sense the outside world again and is able to sit in a wheelchair some almost every day and occasionally goes for a short car ride, but the road to recovery still promises to be long and expensive.

Mrs. Hargraves' mother, Mrs. Billy Joe Mekan, has taken care of her and her little girl since the disabling accident, giving up her job to do so.

THOSE WHO BLOSSOMED LATE

Learning, the "magazine for creative teaching," has a word of encouragement for the parents of a child who just doesn't seem to do very well in school. "If all else has failed in trying to reach a child who seems utterly hopeless," declares the educational publication, "don't give up. Resolve to be patient." It is also suggested to ponder a list of school failures compiled by a British pediatrician, Ronald S. Illingworth.

In the list we find, for example, that classified by their schools as "poor spellers" were William Butler Yeats, who became one of the most famous of Irish poets, and George Bernard Shaw, whose command of the English language enabled him to become one of the most skillful British dramatists.

Felix Adler, who, among other accomplishments, found the German - American Ethical Culture movement; Carl G. Jung, the Swiss psychiatrist; and Ben Franklin were all classified as "poor mathematicians." Franklin confessed in his autobiography that as a youth, "I acquired fair writing pretty soon, but I failed in the arithmetic and made no progress in it." But, as we know, he went on to make a name for himself as a printer, author, publisher, inventor, scientist, public servant, and diplomat. Not bad for a "poor mathematician."

What is one to do when a child not only does poorly in school, but is at the very bottom of the class? That was true of Thomas Alva Edison, one of only nine inventors named to the Hall of Fame, and who went on to patent dozens of inventions, among them the phonograph, motion pictures, and the "incandescent lamp" — now commonly known as a light bulb.

Paul Gauguin, the French painter, was dismissed by teachers as "a dreamer." James Watt, who invented the steam engine and was the very first scientist to apply the technique of "feedback" (in his centrifugal governor) was declared to be "dull and inept." Albert Einstein, his teachers said, was "mentally slow." In fact, Einstein, along with Edgar Allan Poe, Percy B. Shelley, Wilhelm K. Roentgen, and James Abbot McNeill Whistler, were all such poor and "hopeless" students that they were actually expelled from school. Whistler, in fact, flunked out at West Point, went on to a very undistinguished career as a draftsman and map engraver with the Coast & Geodetic Survey in Washington, and, even after he became an accomplished painter, went bankrupt in mid-career.

So, parents, if you have a "slow" child, don't give up! There's lots of hope yet!

PRICE APPEAL NOT ENOUGH

"It is becoming increasingly difficult to attract floor traffic on price appeal alone," says a retail organization bulletin. "It is because competitors are thinking and putting too much emphasis on price ... alone."

Note the word "alone" in the above quote. Price is still an appeal, but the customer is looking for something more than just price.

To remind customers of more than the price and to do this consistently, as the department store association recommends, can be best done in your newspaper. Your newspaper is the only advertising that gets to the house in material form. It waits until the family can get together and discuss the purchase. Keep customers informed with your newspaper.

THE CONSERVATIVE MAJORITY

No one needs to be told that the Congress of the United States is overwhelmingly "liberal". The record shows that over the past several years, legislation passed by the Congress has consistently leaned toward the "liberal" side of the scale.

This would perhaps not be very remarkable except for the altogether interesting fact that in poll after poll on issue after issue, the great majority of the American people have indicated that they are "conservative."

How it is that a conservative people, in a conservative nation, should elect to office legislators who vote "liberal" is something that the political scientists will have to explain — if they can.

In meantime, however, another straw in the wind that indicates a basic, underlying conservatism of millions of Americans can be found in the amazingly rapid growth of a brand- new, national organization bearing a very "plain-Jane" name of "The Conservative Caucus." Starting from ground zero in November, 1974, the new group now boasts 73,000 dues- paying members, 47 State coordinators, 125 congressional district directors, an average of more than 100 people in every congressional district in the United States, and, at the present writing, an additional 150,000 people who have been identified as prospective members.

The Conservative Caucus is headed by National Chairman Meldrim Thomson, Jr., successful businessman, publisher, and Governor of the State of New Hampshire whose conservatism is reflected in the fact that the citizens of his state pay no general sales tax and no income tax — and by National Director Howard Phillips, former Acting Director of the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity and one of the founders of Young Americans for Freedom, who has been described by the WALL STREET JOURNAL as "a sealot for conservatism."

One of the positions espoused by the Conservative Caucus — under the heading of "The Right To National Sovereignty" — is' "The defense policy of the United States should be based on a goal of strategic and tactical supremacy on land, in the sea, in the air, and in space. Our foreign policy should have as its sole and overriding purpose safeguarding the national interest."

Random polls have shown that from 67 to 85 per cent of the groups polled were in favor of such a national policy.

Hopefully, the 1976 elections will bring the legislative and executive branches of the government more in line with the obvious wishes of the people.

TIME FOR ALL OUT WAR ON FEDERAL BUREAUCRACY

More and more complaints are being heard in the hinterlands of bureaucracy in Washington, D.C. Not only is it a case of the wanton spending by these agencies but in the arrogance used in setting up regulations without congressional approval or that of the people.

In the following editorial, the Sunday Topeka-Capital Journal passes along some suggestions in this direction:

Something must be done to reduce the size of federal bureaucracy before its wasteful spending eats us out of house and home and its regulations take away our individual freedoms.

There are countless examples of the proliferation and duplication of federal programs. It was found recently there are 11 separate federal day care programs and 17 manpower training programs in the District of Columbia.

These separate efforts compete with each other for "clients," duplicate services and, in general, waste taxpayers' money.

In 1975 186 programs in the 20 federal agencies furnished funds for "community development." Some 228 federal programs in nine federal agencies sought to improve American health care.

With so many bureaucratic agents shoveling it out, it's no wonder government spends so much of your money. It is a classic case of the right hand not knowing what the left hand is doing, except that federal bureaucracy is no two-handed human, but a multi-handed octopus.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., is making an effort which could lead to reduction in government's size and costliness, although it probably will not solve all the problems of bureaucracy.

Dole told a Senate Committee last week it should institute a system of overseeing federal programs to cut out waste and duplication.

He testified on a bill by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, which would have congressional committees file periodic evaluations of U.S. programs. For instance, the Senate Agriculture Committee would evaluate programs of the Agriculture Department, such as food stamps.

Dole would improve the Muskie bill by requiring congressional committees to use the expertise of the General Accounting Office, Congressional Budget Office and Congressional Research Service.

This is a good suggestion. In judging programs they created, congressmen need the aid of impartial observers. A big-spending liberal congressman might see much less need for trimming food stamp expenditures than would an expert in governmental efficiency.

But some of the three congressional agencies mentioned follow the theory that Washington must support, direct and operate huge agencies for controlling taxpayers. It was GAO, for instance, which recently tried to tell Kansas counties how to equip their jails.

Congress should make sure it gets advice from the grassroots, the citizens who are being controlled and who pay the bills, about the value of government services.

Perhaps a few well chosen words from the voters back home would make the committees do what Senator Dole want them to do: Take steps to eliminate wasteful government duplication and useless programs when they are located.

ACTION ON THE HEARNES CASE

An investigation by the U.S. attorney's office here of Warren E. Hearnes, former governor of Missouri, has been under way for about three years. An indictment has not been returned.

The Internal Revenue Service, which joined in the investigation for a time, said recently it has dropped its criminal investigation of Hearnes but that a civil probe continues.

In the last few days Bert Hurn, U.S. attorney, disclosed his investigation of Hearnes is not yet concluded. He made this disclosure after being pressed by Hearnes to publicly state that the investigation was over and no wrongdoing had been found.

Hearnes can hardly be blamed for trying to force the issue. Three years is a long time to live under the cloud of a continuing, well-publicized inquiry.

Hurn and other authorities cannot be faulted for pursuing an investigation if, as must be assumed, they think they can uncover evidence with which to indict Hearnes. It is their duty to scrutinize when they suspect illegal acts. Still, it is unfortunate that the matter cannot be cleared up more quickly, one way or another.

Hearnes is a lawyer by profession. Currently he is seeking the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate in the primary next August. The circumstances of this investigation make it difficult to pursue either of these interests in a very satisfactory manner.

The general public has ample reason for concern in this case. For if this type of investigation can be conducted of Hearnes, it can happen to anyone else.

Regardless of the outcome, one conclusion seems obvious: Whether Hearnes is indictable or not, the U.S. attorney's office has taken much too long in finding out.

VIOLENCE NFL STYLE

ON THE OCCASION of the crowning of a field judge by a fan-thrown whisky bottle, an official of the National Football League uttered this wisdom:

"The NFL doesn't thrive on violence. It thrives on action. Whatever violence we have in the game is controlled violence."

Tell that to Armen Terzian, the official whose noggin got knocked in the game in Minnesota with the Dallas Cowboys.

The fact is that football is an industry—and it is an industry—that thrives on violence. Broken bones, dislocated shoulders and torn ligaments are an accepted consequences to its "entertainment."

The fans, and we must include ourselves, love it, and have adopted its vocabulary. Hit, attack, bomb, offense, defense...The words of football are also the words of war.

The NFL has pledged a doubling of security for Sunday's title games and the Super Bowl 10 in Miami Jan. 18.

Doubtless the league is familiar with the riots which have occurred in other countries at soccer games and of the hail of seat cushions that sometimes figure in bull fights.

"Football is a highly emotional game," said the NFL official. Certainly, and it is up to all of us—the fans—to restrain ourselves.

But must we accept the grand euphemism of "controlled violence?" Never.

Funny how some people become Newspaper Editors and Managing Editors overnight. The Nursing Home episode brought forth a real gem. "And be sure to get your facts straight" was the comment from one of the walkouts. What was she referring to? It seems she had sent us a news story and had herself misstated a minor detail which our typesetter corrected. A complaint was issued because we printed the true fact. Now the same person complains that we may not print the facts. You better believe this newspaper prints the facts. We don't cover up anything. If we fail to print it, it's because we haven't heard of it or aren't sure of the facts. Here's another reminder. If you want to be sure a touchy subject gets printed, just ask us to leave it out. REMINISCENT OF THE CRUSADES

Christians and Moslems are engaged in a bloody war in Lebanon for control of that country.

The conflict is reminiscent of the Crusades, which occurred 700, 800 and 900 years ago in the same area when the Christians of Europe invaded and attempted to wrest control from the Moslem rulers of that day.

It is just another incident proving that history often does repeat itself.

Realizing this, it is no comfort to Americans who recall that the great Roman Empire fell apart because of its pride, its unGodly practices and its immorality, conditions which exist today in many of our communities, states and the nation.

CONSUMER PROTECTION AND USED CARS

From The Daily Dunklin Democrat
Kennett, Mo.

A kernel of truth underlies that joking question, "Would you buy a used car from this man?" The implication, based more or less on experience, is that when making such a purchase you're likely to be stung unless you know a dealer you can trust not to unload a lemon.

That is a chancy thing, as is reflected in the Federal Trade Commission's findings that the use car market is the "single most troublesome" area of consumer complaints. The market is a huge one—an estimated 12,500,000 second-hand cars were sold in 1973. The FTC believes that a substantial number of cars with mechanical defects are being sold by dealers "who know or should know of the defects but do not inform the prospective purchasers."

All this makes the FTC's proposal for regulation of used car sales a welcome one. In effect what the agency proposes is that dealers be required to disclose—on a window sticker—information valuable to prospective buyers: the make, model and year of the car, its mileage, the nature of prior use (whether, for example, it was previously used as a fleet vehicle, and if so what kind), and repairs which "affect the performance or useful life of the vehicle."

Dealers would also be required to say exactly what repairs would be covered under warranty—and if there is no warranty the customer would have to be so informed. In addition, the commission left open the question whether car buyers should have the right to have a car inspected by an outside mechanic.

This, along with the FTC's actual proposals, will be taken up in hearings. The machinery is in motion now. In another year or so consumers looking for a used car should have markedly better protection than at present.

SOMERSET, KY., COMMONWEALTH-JOURNAL: "It's an ill wind, etc. The government decision to clamp controls on the distribution of propane gas, to be followed by rationing of heating oil, together with predictions of severe fuel shortages anyway if it's a hard winter, have caused a boom in sales of oldtime wood-burning stoves. 'It's unbelievable, says a spokesman for one large manufacturer, who says he already has more orders on file than he can possibly fill. Ben Franklin's fireplace, which always was an efficient heater has been considered mostly a decorator item for lo, these many years, is also enjoying a comeback. Had it not been for the opposition brought by the environmentalists before Congress, we likely would already have the pipeline from Alaska bringing us plenty of oil and making it easier to tell those Arab nations to go to a most unhappy place. Still, the big oil companies, who "think you ought to know," might have curbed the production to keen the price up. But getting back to those environmentalists, we note they are protesting the proposed superhighway from Chicago to Kansas City, and other interstate highways. We think we need the oil and the highways more than we do the environment.

June was named after Juno, the Roman goddess of love, but long before the first troubadour rhymed "June" and "moon," June weddings had become the vogue. In the "matriarchal age" women prepared the food, made the clothing, and personally chose their husbands. Later, when men began to capture women from other tribes, these "prizes of war" became their property. Property meant power, and eventually men gained control of the family and the tribe. As man's wealth increased, he found it easier to buy a wife than to capture one. Romantic love entered the scene in feudal times, but marriage remained more a joining of property than of hearts. Later, romance became popular and with the rise of democracy came more freedom of marital choice. Today, June weddings are still one of our most prosperous institutions.

Purge the Conservatives?

Labor Coalition set to push Moynihan in campaign to oust Jim Buckley

NEW YORK — It was late on the night of Saturday, April 24, in labor's traditional great hall, the Hotel Americana ballroom, when Harvard professor Daniel Patrick Moynihan rose in a warm glow to address his peers, sponsors and champions of his determination to oust Republican-Conservative James Buckley from the U.S. Senate.

It was an hour well past the newspaper and television weekend deadlines. Not that it would have made any copy. It was all low key. But it was a bit of vital political history which is expected to lead to one of the most dramatic election battles of the 1976 campaign.

A Moynihan-Buckley fight could almost overshadow the presidential contest.

It would be a battle of mainstream labor, allied with the Democratic party regulars, against the resurgent conservatism in the Northeast "establishment" arena. Unless there's a freak development, some sudden slip of the tongue or trip of the phrase, Pay Moynihan, 49-year-old ex-longshoreman, ex-ambassador, will slug it out with the 53-year-old Conservative party's Jim Buckley, who can list among those who want to crush him such forces as Nelson Rockefeller and the entire Democratic-liberal-labor alliance.

It would be Harvard against Yale, as only the Irish can fight.

That Saturday night, Moynihan was more at home than he had been in diplomatic chancelleries and university cloisters. On the dais of the "New Direction, Inc." annual scholarship fund banquet were New York's Gov. Hugh Carey, the city's Mayor Abe Beame, labor's men of political organizational expertise, such as the Seafarers' Paul Hall, the International Longshoremen's Association president Teddy Gleason, executive vice president Johnny Bowers and vice president and legislative director Anthony Scotto, who was being honored. Also the Paperworkers' chief Joe Tonelli. It was, in effect, the Scoop Jackson combine which stopped both Jimmy Carter and Mo Udall back on the April 6 primaries here. And last Saturday night they were certain they could repeat their New York victory in Pennsylvania.

There are nuances in these fetes and award dinners which the trendwatcher gets to recognize. This was no hit, speak and run dais. Gov. Carey left some friends in a fine steak and fish restaurant across the street, came, sat, talked quietly with the politically potent labor leaders -- and actually ate the banquet food. And he stayed. So did little Abe Beame, now a Jackson delegate to the Democratic National Convention.

Thus they heard "Pat" arise and tell the 1,300 diners jamming the grand ballroom how much he owes the longshoremen; how right after high school he had gone to work on the Hudson River railroad docks. There was no doubt after the talk that Moynihan is their man.

Not too long before the "New Direction" banquet, the AFL-CIO's No. 2 official, Lane Kirkland, who always is the courier carrying politically pregnant messages from AFL-CIO leader George Meany, told Moynihan at another gathering of labor's most active politicos:

"Pat, I don't know if it's honorable or dishonorable to move from ambassadorship to another form of public service. I confess that I never could quite understand the delicacy of that question. But surely it is an absolute duty, at a time like this, to sally forth from the cloistered halls of academia and offer your services to the valiant and beleaguered people of the great state of New York.

"How can any honorable man continue to seek refuge in Harvard seminars at a time like this?"

This was more than an appeal -- it was a direct endorsement. And there's far more significant there than a race for a Senate seat, even against Jim Buckley. Before Moynihan can tackle the incumbent Republican-Conservative, the former will have to defeat one of the strangest (and I choose the word carefully) collections of Democrats in the fall primaries. Not the least of those New Politics leaders grasping for the nomination is Congresswoman Bella Abzug. She's already ahead of the flock. She has senatorial headquarters in midtown Manhattan and is drenching the city with her rhetoric and literature.

Not the least of the latter has been a news release reporting Bella as the third most powerful Solon in the House of Representatives –right in there behind Speaker Carl Albert and Majority Leader Tip O'Neill. This, the Abzug forces say, is the conclusion of a respectable magazine poll.

It's been a spectacular rise for the 56-year-old Congresswoman known for her scorching attacks on U.S. intelligence services. She's just about completing her third term but has managed to get herself on some key committees -- despite the opposition of some mainstream labor leaders and traditional Democrats.

Some of the insiders at the April 24 Tony Scotto banquet believe Moynihan would be worth outfitting and backing if he can crush Abzug in the primaries. Loud, brash and left wing, she's on the move.

If she ever gets to the Senate for even one six-year term she would sweep new leftism into the upper house. This disturbs the labor people who fought her for years.

New parasite of the alfalfa weevil has invaded Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri Department of Agriculture entomologists are working in cooperation with Dr. James L. Huggans, entomologist at the University of Missouri-Columbia, to establish a new parasite of the alfalfa weevil in Missouri. If the parasite is established, Missouri farmers should notice a reduction in alfalfa weevils in three of four years.

The parasite, a tiny braconid wasp, attacks and lays its eggs inside the body of the adult alfalfa weevil. Parasitized weevils cease egg laying almost immediately. Newly emerged weevils that are attacked fail to develop reproductive organs and do not reproduce.

There are two generations of the wasp per year. The second generation overwinters inside the body of the weevil and emerges the following spring when weevil activity begins.

The wasps were imported from Maryland to initially parasitize weevils in the laboratory. These parasitized weevils will be distributed to five entomologists who will release them in designated alfalfa fields throughout Missouri.

"We've already make one release and we'll probably make another release in June," said Joseph Francka, state entomologist.

Cattleman to sponsor tour

Wray Finney, president of the American National Cattlemen's Association, and Junior Simpson, president of the Missouri Cattlemen's Association, will be in Sikeston Monday to start a statewide cattle industry action tour that will take them to 15 towns across Missouri. All cattlemen in Scott, Mississippi, New Madrid, Stoddard, Cape, Butler and Bollinger counties will meet at 8 p.m. in the Ramada Inn, Highway 62 East.

Finney will conduct a week-long tour that will provide a unique opportunity for local cattlemen to discuss the outlook and changes ahead for the cattle industry. Some of the major topics to be discussed will be union featherbedding; lag in food retailing, causing consumer prices to be higher; and the meat import situation.

James Hendley of Bloomfield, Southeast Missouri Cattlemen's Association director, will be in charge of the meeting and will represent cattlemen from

Wray Finney

Junior Simpsons

Southeast Missouri.

Simpson will be on the program to discuss the Missouri Cattlemen's Association involvement in Legislative Bill 1350, concerning prohibiting state and local government organizations from purchasing beef produced outside the United States.

Simpson will discuss the outlook for Missouri and the advantages it has over neighboring states for cattle production (presently Missouri ranks second in beef cattle number and could possibly move to the No. 1 position very soon).

He will also discuss why the MCA promotes the balancing of the supply of cattle, why meat purchased by food stamps should be U.S. grown, a free market system for U.S. grain, the need to raise deduction on federal estate tax to $200,000 and the consolidation of MCA and Missouri Livestock Feeders Association.

Finney is a seventh-generation cattleman who operates a cow-calf and yearling program. He has been active in ANCA and industry affairs for many years and has been an advocate of cattlemen's interdependency -- one with another, one area with another, and one state with another. He believes having a statewide tour is a great way for Missouri cattlemen to denote that May is National Beef Cattle Month.

Corn planting completed in SeMo

Area Agromony Specialist

PORTAGEVILLE — This spring has been very unusual in Southeast Missouri. It has been warm and relatively dry. Farmers started preparing land in late February and some started planting corn about March 15. By April 23 all of the corn in Scott County had been planted and most of it is up to a good stand. A few fields were planted in cloddy condition and a rain was badly needed to bring corn up.

Well, the rains finally came on April 24 and measured from 0.7 to 2 inches plus around the county. This should bring corn up that was planted in dry, cloddy soil. Several farmers have ran a rotary hoe over their corn to preserve herbicides and control small weeds. I am sure this operation did some good, but it is impossible at this time to tell how much effectiveness preemergence applied herbicides have lost. We are sure that weed control will not be as good as it would have been with adequate rainfall to activate chemicals. Atrazine and lasso will normally hold for 10 days without a rain before loss of activity.

I have seen a few fields of corn with foxtail, nutgrass, and broadleaf weeds coming up. Premergence herbicides may get these, but it is doubtful. Be sure to start cultivation soon and cover as many weeds in the row as possible.

If you have not applied pre-emergence herbicide and plan to go over the top after corn is up, don't wait too long. Atrazine or atrozine + lasso should be applied before grass and weeds are beyond the 2 leaf stagage. Application by air is risky and expensive so plan your program wisely.

Grain sorghum cannot be planted if corn is lost and lasso was applied. On the other hand, soybeans cannot be planted if atrazine was applied. Your herbicide program is extremely important, so be sure to consider all factors before applying herbicides.

Most of the corn is up and growing good. Scott County farmers planted about 16,000 acres the past two years. I believe we have nearly 25,000 acres planted this year. Average yield per acre was 63 bushels in 1974 and 98 bushels in 1975. I hope for higher yields this year.

Several farmers have already started sidedressing or top-dressing nitrogen- this is a good idea. Early applied nitrogen will be converted to nitrate and ready for plant use when needed. Anhydrous ammonia is still the major source of N for corn, but liquid N, Urea, and ammonium nitrate are used on many acres. All four are excellent sources when applied at the same rate of actual N and correct method is used.

Placing nitrogen in the middles is sufficient. Be sure anhydrous is applied 6 to 8 inches deep. Anhydrous should not be used on soils that do not seal good. Considerable N will be lost. If N is topdressed by ground equipment an early application will burn corn leaves less than a later application. However, if burning does occur, it is only temporary and does not normally reduce yield. If liquid nitrogen is topdressed, it should be applied soon after corn has emerged. If solid nitrogen (ammonium nitrate or Urea) or liquid nitrogen are used to topdress cornwith, they should be cultivated into the soil soon after application unless ½" rain follows application within 24 hours. Apply 150 to 200 pounds of actual N per acre for irrigated corn and 125 to 150 if unirrigated.

A lot of fields will need a post-emergence application of 2, 4-D or similar material to control broadleaf weeds. Use ¼ to ½ pounds per acre of acid equivalent to control most annual broadleaved weeds. Use drops on ground equipment if corn is over 10 inches tall and weeds are shorter. Adjust nozzles so that the spray fans cross about 2½ inches above the tops of the weeds. This treatment is most effective on small weeds. Do not apply from the beginning of tasseling to the dough stage. 2, 4-D can cause temporary brittleness of corn stalks. If this occurs, the corn may be too brittle to be cultivated for about 7 to 10 days after application. Some varieties are more susceptible than others. Similar materials are: Banvel, Banvel +2, ½-D, and Lithate (a non-volatile form of 2, 4-D). Be sure to be very careful when applying 2, ½-D.

Black birds have been and still are a problem in many fields. I don't know of any legal recommended control measures.

AP Farm Roundup
New grain-sales have been made to USSR

WASHINGTON (AP) — New grain sales have been made to the Soviet Union, including some wheat and corn, which will be charged against a long-term agreement calling for deliveries to begin this fall.

The Agriculture Department said late Wednesday that Russia has bought 3.4 million metric tons of grain, the first round of sales since early last November. The new sales had been anticipated by department experts for several months.

Although USDA declined to identify the firms, Continental Grain Co., New York, announced later that it had sold two million tons of the grain. Other companies involved, according to trade sources, were Cook Industries, Memphis, Tenn., and Cargill, Inc., Minneapolis, Minn.

The department said a total of two million tons of corn involved in the sales would come from the 1975 harvest. That boosted to about 15.8 million tons the amount of grain sold to the Soviets last July, including about 11.4 million tons of feed grain, nearly all corn, and 4.4 million tons of wheat.

A metric ton is 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat. It is the unit most commonly used in international grain trade.

The new sales have been "counted" in official export projections for some time and will not materially affect consumer food prices, according to department experts. Record grain crops last year have led to a modest buildup of U.S. reserves and the department says farmers could harvest huge new crops this year if they get normal weather.

About 1.4 million tons of the new grain, including 1.1 million of corn and 300,000 of wheat, will be delivered to Russia after Oct. 1 from this year's harvest. Under terms of the five-year pact signed last fall, Russia will buy at least six million tons of wheat and corn annually. The agreement also allows the Soviets to purchase up to eight million tons a year, but if they want more they must consult with U.S. officials.

The grain bought from last year's harvest is not counted as part of the five-year agreement and is being sought by Russia to help meet current needs. A drought-damaged grain crop last year, which fell far short of requirements, forced Russia to buy grain on the world market, including the 15.8 million tons so far from the United States.

When the long-term agreement was announced last Oct. 20, U.S. officials said Russia would be able to buy a total of around 17 million tons of grain from the 1975-76 supply without further discussions. Now, with 15.8 million purchased, Russia is within about 1.2 million tons of that limit.

Despite the substantial sales to Russia, those are a fraction of total U.S. grain exports this season. Wheat shipments in 1975-76, for example, are expected to total about 32.7 million tons to all countries and corn about 39.4 million, according to USDA.

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you have a foreign source for special steaks or chops it may be a little easier now to bring the meat into the United States, up to 50 pounds, anyway.

The Agriculture Department says it is doing away with federal certification paperwork, which has been required for importing small quantities of meat from abroad. But officials warned that regulations prohibiting meat from countries with foot-and-mouth disease, rinderpest, hog cholera and certain other livestock disease will continue in effect.

For example, a spokesman said, a tourist coming home from Canada or Mexico—or other countries—may be able to carry along a small quantity of meat without filling out all the certification papers in advance, as had been required. But the meat still will be subject to regular customs inspections and regulations to insure that it did not originate from countries where diseases have been a problem and that it meets all other requirements.

Farm equipment costs to increase

By RICHARD F. McCINTOSH
Area Farm Management Specialist

BENTON — Farm machinery and equipment investments are high. From all indications, they will go even higher. A study of University of Missouri Mail-In-Record program cooperators for 1966 through 1975 revealed some interesting data on machinery and equipment.

Total machinery expenditures and book value data for 1975 indicate the average cooperator has about 500 crop acres. Over the years this average farmer has spent about $160 per crop acre for the machinery currently on his farm. The undepreciated value (often called book value or remaining value) is about $75 per crop acre or 47 per cent of the original cost basis. The book value may be below current resale value because of the rapid inflation in recent years. Since farmers depreciate machines over a period of years, the book value tends to lag behind machinery prices.

The annual depreciation on machinery in 1975 was about $15.67 per crop acre. This means machinery is being depreciated about 21 per cent per year.

Because of inflation, substitution of machinery for other inputs, etc. machinery purchases each year have been about 1.5 times estimated depreciation, or about 36 per cent of the beginning- of- year book value of machinery. New investments in machinery were about $24 per crop acre in 1975. Machinery investments on a per acre basis have about doubled since 1971.

These figures indicate what has happened on a per crop acre basis but that is only part of the picture. Farms have also increased in size. From 1966 to 1975 the average crop acres of farms in the mail-in-record program increased from 365 acres to 516 acres or about 41 per cent.

From all indications farms will continue to grow in size. The rate at which farmers are purchasing larger equipment indicates the substitution of capital in the form of machinery for labor has not stopped. Inflation is still with us and will probably continue (hopefully at a lower rate). The logical consequence will be a continued increase in machinery prices.

Since 1971, the change in book value of machinery has been plus 13 per cent from 1971 to 1972; plus 10 per cent from 1972 to 1973; plus 16 per cent from 1973 to 1974; and plus 12 per cent from 1974 to 1975. Indications are the USDA's machinery price index will increase 9 to 10 per cent from 1975 to 1976.

Machinery and equipment investments increase for many reasons. They may increase simply because more acres were added. However, on a per acre basis, they may increase because of inflation, substitution change in crops produced timeliness, or maybe just a desire to work less or keep up with a neighbor.

Are your machinery investments accomplishing your objectives? How do your machinery investments, costs, etc. compare to other farmers? You have the necessary information with your income tax report and depreciation schedule to see where you stand.

THOSE WHO BLOSSOMED LATE

Learning, the "magazine for creative teaching," has a word of encouragement for the parents of a child who just doesn't seem to do very well in school. "If all else has failed in trying to reach a child who seems utterly hopeless," declares the educational publication, "don't give up. Resolve to be patient." It is also suggested to ponder a list of school failures compiled by a British pediatrician, Ronald S. Illingworth.

In the list we find, for example, that classified by their schools as "poor spellers" were William Butler Yeats, who became one of the most famous of Irish poets, and George Bernard Shaw, whose command of the English language enabled him to become one of the most skillful British dramatists.

Felix Adler, who, among other accomplishments, found the German - American Ethical Culture movement; Carl G. Jung, the Swiss psychiatrist; and Ben Franklin were all classified as "poor mathematicians." Franklin confessed in his autobiography that as a youth, "I acquired fair writing pretty soon, but I failed in the arithmetic and made no progress in it." But, as we know, he went on to make a name for himself as a printer, author, publisher, inventor, scientist, public servant, and diplomat. Not bad for a "poor mathematician."

What is one to do when a child not only does poorly in school, but is at the very bottom of the class? That was true of Thomas Alva Edison, one of only nine inventors named to the Hall of Fame, and who went on to patent dozens of inventions, among them the phonograph, motion pictures, and the "incandescent lamp" — now commonly known as a light bulb.

Paul Gauguin, the French painter, was dismissed by teachers as "a dreamer." James Watt, who invented the steam engine and was the very first scientist to apply the technique of "feedback" (in his centrifugal governor) was declared to be "dull and inept." Albert Einstein, his teachers said, was "mentally slow." In fact, Einstein, along with Edgar Allan Poe, Percy B. Shelley, Wilhelm K. Roentgen, and James Abbot McNeill Whistler, were all such poor and "hopeless" students that they were actually expelled from school. Whistler, in fact, flunked out at West Point, went on to a very undistinguished career as a draftsman and map engraver with the Coast & Geodetic Survey in Washington, and, even after he became an accomplished painter, went bankrupt in mid-career.

So, parents, if you have a "slow" child, don't give up! There's lots of hope yet!

PRICE APPEAL NOT ENOUGH

"It is becoming increasingly difficult to attract floor traffic on price appeal alone," says a retail organization bulletin. "It is because competitors are thinking and putting too much emphasis on price ... alone."

Note the word "alone" in the above quote. Price is still an appeal, but the customer is looking for something more than just price.

To remind customers of more than the price and to do this consistently, as the department store association recommends, can be best done in your newspaper. Your newspaper is the only advertising that gets to the house in material form. It waits until the family can get together and discuss the purchase. Keep customers informed with your newspaper.

THE CONSERVATIVE MAJORITY

No one needs to be told that the Congress of the United States is overwhelmingly "liberal". The record shows that over the past several years, legislation passed by the Congress has consistently leaned toward the "liberal" side of the scale.

This would perhaps not be very remarkable except for the altogether interesting fact that in poll after poll on issue after issue, the great majority of the American people have indicated that they are "conservative."

How it is that a conservative people, in a conservative nation, should elect to office legislators who vote "liberal" is something that the political scientists will have to explain — if they can.

In meantime, however, another straw in the wind that indicates a basic, underlying conservatism of millions of Americans can be found in the amazingly rapid growth of a brand- new, national organization bearing a very "plain-Jane" name of "The Conservative Caucus." Starting from ground zero in November, 1974, the new group now boasts 73,000 dues- paying members, 47 State coordinators, 125 congressional district directors, an average of more than 100 people in every congressional district in the United States, and, at the present writing, an additional 150,000 people who have been identified as prospective members.

The Conservative Caucus is headed by National Chairman Meldrim Thomson, Jr., successful businessman, publisher, and Governor of the State of New Hampshire whose conservatism is reflected in the fact that the citizens of his state pay no general sales tax and no income tax — and by National Director Howard Phillips, former Acting Director of the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity and one of the founders of Young Americans for Freedom, who has been described by the WALL STREET JOURNAL as "a sealot for conservatism."

One of the positions espoused by the Conservative Caucus — under the heading of "The Right To National Sovereignty" — is' "The defense policy of the United States should be based on a goal of strategic and tactical supremacy on land, in the sea, in the air, and in space. Our foreign policy should have as its sole and overriding purpose safeguarding the national interest."

Random polls have shown that from 67 to 85 per cent of the groups polled were in favor of such a national policy.

Hopefully, the 1976 elections will bring the legislative and executive branches of the government more in line with the obvious wishes of the people.

TIME FOR ALL OUT WAR ON FEDERAL BUREAUCRACY

More and more complaints are being heard in the hinterlands of bureaucracy in Washington, D.C. Not only is it a case of the wanton spending by these agencies but in the arrogance used in setting up regulations without congressional approval or that of the people.

In the following editorial, the Sunday Topeka-Capital Journal passes along some suggestions in this direction:

Something must be done to reduce the size of federal bureaucracy before its wasteful spending eats us out of house and home and its regulations take away our individual freedoms.

There are countless examples of the proliferation and duplication of federal programs. It was found recently there are 11 separate federal day care programs and 17 manpower training programs in the District of Columbia.

These separate efforts compete with each other for "clients," duplicate services and, in general, waste taxpayers' money.

In 1975 186 programs in the 20 federal agencies furnished funds for "community development." Some 228 federal programs in nine federal agencies sought to improve American health care.

With so many bureaucratic agents shoveling it out, it's no wonder government spends so much of your money. It is a classic case of the right hand not knowing what the left hand is doing, except that federal bureaucracy is no two-handed human, but a multi-handed octopus.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., is making an effort which could lead to reduction in government's size and costliness, although it probably will not solve all the problems of bureaucracy.

Dole told a Senate Committee last week it should institute a system of overseeing federal programs to cut out waste and duplication.

He testified on a bill by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, which would have congressional committees file periodic evaluations of U.S. programs. For instance, the Senate Agriculture Committee would evaluate programs of the Agriculture Department, such as food stamps.

Dole would improve the Muskie bill by requiring congressional committees to use the expertise of the General Accounting Office, Congressional Budget Office and Congressional Research Service.

This is a good suggestion. In judging programs they created, congressmen need the aid of impartial observers. A big-spending liberal congressman might see much less need for trimming food stamp expenditures than would an expert in governmental efficiency.

But some of the three congressional agencies mentioned follow the theory that Washington must support, direct and operate huge agencies for controlling taxpayers. It was GAO, for instance, which recently tried to tell Kansas counties how to equip their jails.

Congress should make sure it gets advice from the grassroots, the citizens who are being controlled and who pay the bills, about the value of government services.

Perhaps a few well chosen words from the voters back home would make the committees do what Senator Dole want them to do: Take steps to eliminate wasteful government duplication and useless programs when they are located.

ACTION ON THE HEARNES CASE

An investigation by the U.S. attorney's office here of Warren E. Hearnes, former governor of Missouri, has been under way for about three years. An indictment has not been returned.

The Internal Revenue Service, which joined in the investigation for a time, said recently it has dropped its criminal investigation of Hearnes but that a civil probe continues.

In the last few days Bert Hurn, U.S. attorney, disclosed his investigation of Hearnes is not yet concluded. He made this disclosure after being pressed by Hearnes to publicly state that the investigation was over and no wrongdoing had been found.

Hearnes can hardly be blamed for trying to force the issue. Three years is a long time to live under the cloud of a continuing, well-publicized inquiry.

Hurn and other authorities cannot be faulted for pursuing an investigation if, as must be assumed, they think they can uncover evidence with which to indict Hearnes. It is their duty to scrutinize when they suspect illegal acts. Still, it is unfortunate that the matter cannot be cleared up more quickly, one way or another.

Hearnes is a lawyer by profession. Currently he is seeking the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate in the primary next August. The circumstances of this investigation make it difficult to pursue either of these interests in a very satisfactory manner.

The general public has ample reason for concern in this case. For if this type of investigation can be conducted of Hearnes, it can happen to anyone else.

Regardless of the outcome, one conclusion seems obvious: Whether Hearnes is indictable or not, the U.S. attorney's office has taken much too long in finding out.

VIOLENCE NFL STYLE

ON THE OCCASION of the crowning of a field judge by a fan-thrown whisky bottle, an official of the National Football League uttered this wisdom:

"The NFL doesn't thrive on violence. It thrives on action. Whatever violence we have in the game is controlled violence."

Tell that to Armen Terzian, the official whose noggin got knocked in the game in Minnesota with the Dallas Cowboys.

The fact is that football is an industry—and it is an industry—that thrives on violence. Broken bones, dislocated shoulders and torn ligaments are an accepted consequences to its "entertainment."

The fans, and we must include ourselves, love it, and have adopted its vocabulary. Hit, attack, bomb, offense, defense...The words of football are also the words of war.

The NFL has pledged a doubling of security for Sunday's title games and the Super Bowl 10 in Miami Jan. 18.

Doubtless the league is familiar with the riots which have occurred in other countries at soccer games and of the hail of seat cushions that sometimes figure in bull fights.

"Football is a highly emotional game," said the NFL official. Certainly, and it is up to all of us—the fans—to restrain ourselves.

But must we accept the grand euphemism of "controlled violence?" Never.

Funny how some people become Newspaper Editors and Managing Editors overnight. The Nursing Home episode brought forth a real gem. "And be sure to get your facts straight" was the comment from one of the walkouts. What was she referring to? It seems she had sent us a news story and had herself misstated a minor detail which our typesetter corrected. A complaint was issued because we printed the true fact. Now the same person complains that we may not print the facts. You better believe this newspaper prints the facts. We don't cover up anything. If we fail to print it, it's because we haven't heard of it or aren't sure of the facts. Here's another reminder. If you want to be sure a touchy subject gets printed, just ask us to leave it out. REMINISCENT OF THE CRUSADES

Christians and Moslems are engaged in a bloody war in Lebanon for control of that country.

The conflict is reminiscent of the Crusades, which occurred 700, 800 and 900 years ago in the same area when the Christians of Europe invaded and attempted to wrest control from the Moslem rulers of that day.

It is just another incident proving that history often does repeat itself.

Realizing this, it is no comfort to Americans who recall that the great Roman Empire fell apart because of its pride, its unGodly practices and its immorality, conditions which exist today in many of our communities, states and the nation.

CONSUMER PROTECTION AND USED CARS

Dunklin Democrat
Kennett, Mo.

A kernel of truth underlies that joking question, "Would you buy a used car from this man?" The implication, based more or less on experience, is that when making such a purchase you're likely to be stung unless you know a dealer you can trust not to unload a lemon.

That is a chancy thing, as is reflected in the Federal Trade Commission's findings that the use car market is the "single most troublesome" area of consumer complaints. The market is a huge one—an estimated 12,500,000 second-hand cars were sold in 1973. The FTC believes that a substantial number of cars with mechanical defects are being sold by dealers "who know or should know of the defects but do not inform the prospective purchasers."

All this makes the FTC's proposal for regulation of used car sales a welcome one. In effect what the agency proposes is that dealers be required to disclose—on a window sticker—information valuable to prospective buyers: the make, model and year of the car, its mileage, the nature of prior use (whether, for example, it was previously used as a fleet vehicle, and if so what kind), and repairs which "affect the performance or useful life of the vehicle."

Dealers would also be required to say exactly what repairs would be covered under warranty—and if there is no warranty the customer would have to be so informed. In addition, the commission left open the question whether car buyers should have the right to have a car inspected by an outside mechanic.

This, along with the FTC's actual proposals, will be taken up in hearings. The machinery is in motion now. In another year or so consumers looking for a used car should have markedly better protection than at present.

SOMERSET, KY., COMMONWEALTH-JOURNAL: "It's an ill wind, etc. The government decision to clamp controls on the distribution of propane gas, to be followed by rationing of heating oil, together with predictions of severe fuel shortages anyway if it's a hard winter, have caused a boom in sales of oldtime wood-burning stoves. 'It's unbelievable, says a spokesman for one large manufacturer, who says he already has more orders on file than he can possibly fill. Ben Franklin's fireplace, which always was an efficient heater has been considered mostly a decorator item for lo, these many years, is also enjoying a comeback. The phenomenon raises the question, of course, of where everybody is going to get the wood to burn in all these stoves, not to mention the effects on air pollution. OIL OVER THE ENVIRONMENT

Had it not been for the opposition brought by the environmentalists before Congress, we likely would already have the pipeline from Alaska bringing us plenty of oil and making it easier to tell those Arab nations to go to a most unhappy place. Still, the big oil companies, who "think you ought to know," might have curbed the production to keen the price up. But getting back to those environmentalists, we note they are protesting the proposed superhighway from Chicago to Kansas City, and other interstate highways. We think we need the oil and the highways more than we do the environment.

June was named after Juno, the Roman goddess of love, but long before the first troubadour rhymed "June" and "moon," June weddings had become the vogue. In the "matriarchal age" women prepared the food, made the clothing, and personally chose their husbands. Later, when men began to capture women from other tribes, these "prizes of war" became their property. Property meant power, and eventually men gained control of the family and the tribe. As man's wealth increased, he found it easier to buy a wife than to capture one. Romantic love entered the scene in feudal times, but marriage remained more a joining of property than of hearts. Later, romance became popular and with the rise of democracy came more freedom of marital choice. Today, June weddings are still one of our most prosperous institutions.

Inside Labor

Purge the Conservatives?

Labor Coalition set to push Moynihan in campaign to oust Jim Buckley

NEW YORK — It was late on the night of Saturday, April 24, in labor's traditional great hall, the Hotel Americana ballroom, when Harvard professor Daniel Patrick Moynihan rose in a warm glow to address his peers, sponsors and champions of his determination to oust Republican-Conservative James Buckley from the U.S. Senate.

It was an hour well past the newspaper and television weekend deadlines. Not that it would have made any copy. It was all low key. But it was a bit of vital political history which is expected to lead to one of the most dramatic election battles of the 1976 campaign.

A Moynihan-Buckley fight could almost overshadow the presidential contest.

It would be a battle of mainstream labor, allied with the Democratic party regulars, against the resurgent conservatism in the Northeast "establishment" arena. Unless there's a freak development, some sudden slip of the tongue or trip of the phrase, Pay Moynihan, 49-year-old ex-longshoreman, ex-ambassador, will slug it out with the 53-year-old Conservative party's Jim Buckley, who can list among those who want to crush him such forces as Nelson Rockefeller and the entire Democratic-liberal-labor alliance.

It would be Harvard against Yale, as only the Irish can fight.

That Saturday night, Moynihan was more at home than he had been in diplomatic chancelleries and university cloisters. On the dais of the "New Direction, Inc." annual scholarship fund banquet were New York's Gov. Hugh Carey, the city's Mayor Abe Beame, labor's men of political organizational expertise, such as the Seafarers' Paul Hall, the International Longshoremen's Association president Teddy Gleason, executive vice president Johnny Bowers and vice president and legislative director Anthony Scotto, who was being honored. Also the Paperworkers' chief Joe Tonelli. It was, in effect, the Scoop Jackson combine which stopped both Jimmy Carter and Mo Udall back on the April 6 primaries here. And last Saturday night they were certain they could repeat their New York victory in Pennsylvania.

There are nuances in these fetes and award dinners which the trendwatcher gets to recognize. This was no hit, speak and run dais. Gov. Carey left some friends in a fine steak and fish restaurant across the street, came, sat, talked quietly with the politically potent labor leaders -- and actually ate the banquet food. And he stayed. So did little Abe Beame, now a Jackson delegate to the Democratic National Convention.

Thus they heard "Pat" arise and tell the 1,300 diners jamming the grand ballroom how much he owes the longshoremen; how right after high school he had gone to work on the Hudson River railroad docks. There was no doubt after the talk that Moynihan is their man.

Not too long before the "New Direction" banquet, the AFL-CIO's No. 2 official, Lane Kirkland, who always is the courier carrying politically pregnant messages from AFL-CIO leader George Meany, told Moynihan at another gathering of labor's most active politicos:

"Pat, I don't know if it's honorable or dishonorable to move from ambassadorship to another form of public service. I confess that I never could quite understand the delicacy of that question. But surely it is an absolute duty, at a time like this, to sally forth from the cloistered halls of academia and offer your services to the valiant and beleaguered people of the great state of New York.

"How can any honorable man continue to seek refuge in Harvard seminars at a time like this?"

This was more than an appeal -- it was a direct endorsement. And there's far more significant there than a race for a Senate seat, even against Jim Buckley. Before Moynihan can tackle the incumbent Republican-Conservative, the former will have to defeat one of the strangest (and I choose the word carefully) collections of Democrats in the fall primaries. Not the least of those New Politics leaders grasping for the nomination is Congresswoman Bella Abzug. She's already ahead of the flock. She has senatorial headquarters in midtown Manhattan and is drenching the city with her rhetoric and literature.

Not the least of the latter has been a news release reporting Bella as the third most powerful Solon in the House of Representatives –right in there behind Speaker Carl Albert and Majority Leader Tip O'Neill. This, the Abzug forces say, is the conclusion of a respectable magazine poll.

It's been a spectacular rise for the 56-year-old Congresswoman known for her scorching attacks on U.S. intelligence services. She's just about completing her third term but has managed to get herself on some key committees -- despite the opposition of some mainstream labor leaders and traditional Democrats.

Some of the insiders at the April 24 Tony Scotto banquet believe Moynihan would be worth outfitting and backing if he can crush Abzug in the primaries. Loud, brash and left wing, she's on the move.

If she ever gets to the Senate for even one six-year term she would sweep new leftism into the upper house. This disturbs the labor people who fought her for years.

Agronomist lists herbicides soybeans

By THOMAS BROWN
Area agronomy specialist

BLOOMFIELD — Weeds take a heavy toll of the farmer's soybean yields and profits in this area each year. Herbicides, when selected in accordance with specific weed problems in each field and properly applied in combination with good cultural practices, will do much to prevent this loss of income by controlling weeds in this crop.

The following herbicides are recommended for preplant incorporated and surface-applied preemergency weed control treatments for soybeans.

Preplant treatments

Trifluralin (Treflan) provides excellent control of annual grasses and is effective against most small-seeded broadleaved weeds. It will not control large-seeded broadleaved weeds including cocklebur, morning glory, jimsonweed, ragweed, velvet leaf and teaweed.

This chemical should be applied before planting and incorporated into the upper two inches of soil as soon as practicable (within eight hours). Trifluralin requires less moisture than most herbicides for effective weed control.

Butralin (Amex), fluchloralin (Basalin), dinitramine (Cobex), penoxalin (Prowl) and profluralin (Tolban) are relatively new herbicides which have label clearance for use on soybeans. They are all chemically similar to trifluralin and produce similar weed control results to this herbicide.

Vernolate (Vernam) gives good control of annual grasses and is effective against wild cane and Johnson grass seedlings.

Pre-emergency treatments

Alachlor (Lasso) is recommended for the control of most annual grasses including late-season fall panicum and gives satisfactory control of pigweed. It does not leach as readily as some herbicides, therefore, it is effective under high rainfall conditions. It is an excellent chemical to use in combination with herbicides which are effective against a wide variety of broadleaved weeds.

Linuron (Lorox) is effective in the control of several annual grasses and broadleaved weeds common to this area. It provides only fair control of cocklebur, jimsonweed, morning glory and teaweed and poor control of nutgrass and Johnson grass seedlings.

Its safety margin between good weed control and crop injury is narrow; therefore, care should be taken to select the proper application rate in accordance with soil conditions and to carefully calibrate the sprayer to apply the proper amount. No single application rate can be safely used in fields having major variations in soil type.

Linuron should not be used on sandy soils or heavy soils with over four per cent organic matter. It performs well in mixtures with other herbicides.

Metribuzin (Sencor or Lanex) provides good control of most annual grasses and small-seeded broadleaved weeds and some large seeded ones, including cocklebur, jimsonweed, smartweed, velvetleaf, ragweed and teaweed. It does not always control deep seeded cocklebur and morning glory as well as barnyardgrass.

Its safety margin is also narrow so the safety precautions outlined for Linuron should also be observed in the use of metribuzin. It has also performed well in mixtures with other herbicides.

Alachlor + linuron (Lasso + Lorox) combined is effective against a wide variety of grasses and broadleaved weeds. Precuations outlined for linuron should also be observed when applying this mixture.

Alachlor + metribuzin (Lasso + Sencor or Lexone) also controls a wide variety of grasses and broadleaved weeds. Precautions suggested for metribuzin should also be observed when applying this combination.

Incorporated plus Pre-emergence

A surface-applied pre-emergency application of either Metribuzin (Sencor) or linuron (Lorox) during or following the planting operation after a preplant incorporated treatment of trifluralin (Treflan) has been applied will result in the control of a wider variety of grasses and broadleaved weeds than that provided by either chemical involved used alone. Such a combination of herbicides could prove profitable in many cases.

More detailed information pertaining to chemical weed control for soybeans, including recommended rates of application, may be obtained from county University of Missouri Extension Centers.

No. 1 producer in the Southeast Association was reported by Ronnie Voshage, herdsman for Southeast Missouri University Dairy. Holstein No. 3 of the University herd pumped out 3.5 pounds butterfat in 111.8 pounds milk.

Second, third and fourth place animals, reported by the Clem Schabbing Dairy, were No. 303 with 3.1 pounds butterfat in 90.1 pounds milk, No. 316 with 2.9 pounds butterfat in 95.8 pounds milk and No. 300 with 2.8 pounds butterfat in 78.3 pounds milk.

Two cows tied for fifth place -- Dafney of the Joe Kirchdoerfer herd of Cape Girardeau and No. 122 of the Clem Schabbing herd with 2.7 pounds butterfat in 54.3 pounds milk.

The Ches-Nan Dairy reported the high five cows in the St. Francois Association. They are: Lizza, with 2.8 pounds butterfat in 73.5 pounds milk; Grams, with 2.5 pounds butterfat in 66.6 pounds milk; Samtha, with two pounds butterfat in 56 pounds milk; Peachy, with two pounds butterfat in 54 pounds milk; and Honey, with 1.8 pounds butterfat in 56.8 pounds milk.

Cows on dairy herd improvement records in Missouri produce approximately 2,500 pounds more milk per year than the average Missouri cow. At $8.50 per hundred weight of milk, this amounts to around $215 more gross income annually or over $10,000 extra for a herd of 50 cows.

Also, hundreds of dollars can be saved yearly on feed that is wasted on "boarder" cows by using DHIA records. Dairymen interested in improving profits through records should contact their local University of Missouri Extension Center or their DHIA fieldman.

New parasite of the alfalfa weevil has invaded Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri Department of Agriculture entomologists are working in cooperation with Dr. James L. Huggans, entomologist at the University of Missouri-Columbia, to establish a new parasite of the alfalfa weevil in Missouri. If the parasite is established, Missouri farmers should notice a reduction in alfalfa weevils in three of four years.

The parasite, a tiny braconid wasp, attacks and lays its eggs inside the body of the adult alfalfa weevil. Parasitized weevils cease egg laying almost immediately. Newly emerged weevils that are attacked fail to develop reproductive organs and do not reproduce.

There are two generations of the wasp per year. The second generation overwinters inside the body of the weevil and emerges the following spring when weevil activity begins.

The wasps were imported from Maryland to initially parasitize weevils in the laboratory. These parasitized weevils will be distributed to five entomologists who will release them in designated alfalfa fields throughout Missouri.

"We've already make one release and we'll probably make another release in June," said Joseph Francka, state entomologist.

Cattleman to sponsor tour

Wray Finney, president of the American National Cattlemen's Association, and Junior Simpson, president of the Missouri Cattlemen's Association, will be in Sikeston Monday to start a statewide cattle industry action tour that will take them to 15 towns across Missouri. All cattlemen in Scott, Mississippi, New Madrid, Stoddard, Cape, Butler and Bollinger counties will meet at 8 p.m. in the Ramada Inn, Highway 62 East.

Finney will conduct a week-long tour that will provide a unique opportunity for local cattlemen to discuss the outlook and changes ahead for the cattle industry. Some of the major topics to be discussed will be union featherbedding; lag in food retailing, causing consumer prices to be higher; and the meat import situation.

James Hendley of Bloomfield, Southeast Missouri Cattlemen's Association director, will be in charge of the meeting and will represent cattlemen from

Wray Finney

Junior Simpsons

Southeast Missouri.

Simpson will be on the program to discuss the Missouri Cattlemen's Association involvement in Legislative Bill 1350, concerning prohibiting state and local government organizations from purchasing beef produced outside the United States.

Simpson will discuss the outlook for Missouri and the advantages it has over neighboring states for cattle production (presently Missouri ranks second in beef cattle number and could possibly move to the No. 1 position very soon).

He will also discuss why the MCA promotes the balancing of the supply of cattle, why meat purchased by food stamps should be U.S. grown, a free market system for U.S. grain, the need to raise deduction on federal estate tax to $200,000 and the consolidation of MCA and Missouri Livestock Feeders Association.

Finney is a seventh-generation cattleman who operates a cow-calf and yearling program. He has been active in ANCA and industry affairs for many years and has been an advocate of cattlemen's interdependency -- one with another, one area with another, and one state with another. He believes having a statewide tour is a great way for Missouri cattlemen to denote that May is National Beef Cattle Month.

AP Farm Roundup New grain-sales have been made to USSR

WASHINGTON (AP) — New grain sales have been made to the Soviet Union, including some wheat and corn, which will be charged against a long-term agreement calling for deliveries to begin this fall.

The Agriculture Department said late Wednesday that Russia has bought 3.4 million metric tons of grain, the first round of sales since early last November. The new sales had been anticipated by department experts for several months.

Although USDA declined to identify the firms, Continental Grain Co., New York, announced later that it had sold two million tons of the grain. Other companies involved, according to trade sources, were Cook Industries, Memphis, Tenn., and Cargill, Inc., Minneapolis, Minn.

The department said a total of two million tons of corn involved in the sales would come from the 1975 harvest. That boosted to about 15.8 million tons the amount of grain sold to the Soviets last July, including about 11.4 million tons of feed grain, nearly all corn, and 4.4 million tons of wheat.

A metric ton is 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat. It is the unit most commonly used in international grain trade.

The new sales have been "counted" in official export projections for some time and will not materially affect consumer food prices, according to department experts. Record grain crops last year have led to a modest buildup of U.S. reserves and the department says farmers could harvest huge new crops this year if they get normal weather.

About 1.4 million tons of the new grain, including 1.1 million of corn and 300,000 of wheat, will be delivered to Russia after Oct. 1 from this year's harvest. Under terms of the five-year pact signed last fall, Russia will buy at least six million tons of wheat and corn annually. The agreement also allows the Soviets to purchase up to eight million tons a year, but if they want more they must consult with U.S. officials.

The grain bought from last year's harvest is not counted as part of the five-year agreement and is being sought by Russia to help meet current needs. A drought-damaged grain crop last year, which fell far short of requirements, forced Russia to buy grain on the world market, including the 15.8 million tons so far from the United States.

When the long-term agreement was announced last Oct. 20, U.S. officials said Russia would be able to buy a total of around 17 million tons of grain from the 1975-76 supply without further discussions. Now, with 15.8 million purchased, Russia is within about 1.2 million tons of that limit.

Despite the substantial sales to Russia, those are a fraction of total U.S. grain exports this season. Wheat shipments in 1975-76, for example, are expected to total about 32.7 million tons to all countries and corn about 39.4 million, according to USDA.

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you have a foreign source for special steaks or chops it may be a little easier now to bring the meat into the United States, up to 50 pounds, anyway.

The Agriculture Department says it is doing away with federal certification paperwork, which has been required for importing small quantities of meat from abroad. But officials warned that regulations prohibiting meat from countries with foot-and-mouth disease, rinderpest, hog cholera and certain other livestock disease will continue in effect.

For example, a spokesman said, a tourist coming home from Canada or Mexico—or other countries—may be able to carry along a small quantity of meat without filling out all the certification papers in advance, as had been required. But the meat still will be subject to regular customs inspections and regulations to insure that it did not originate from countries where diseases have been a problem and that it meets all other requirements.

Corn planting completed in SeMo

Area Agromony Specialist

PORTAGEVILLE — This spring has been very unusual ir Southeast Missouri. It has beer warm and relatively dry. Farmers started preparing lanc in late February and some started planting corn about March 15. By April 23 all of the corn in Scott County had been planted and most of it is up to a good stand. A few fields were planted in cloddy condition and a rain was badly needed to bring corn up.

Well, the rains finally came on April 24 and measured from 0.7 to 2 inches plus around the county. This should bring corn up that was planted in dry, cloddy soil. Several farmers have ran a rotary hoe over their corn to preserve herbicides and control small weeds. I am sure this operation did some good, but it is impossible at this time to tell how much effectiveness preemergence applied herbicides have lost. We are sure that weed control will not be as good as it would have been with adequate rainfall to activate chemicals. Atrazine and lasso will normally hold for 10 days without a rain before loss of activity.

I have seen a few fields of corn with foxtail, nutgrass, and broadleaf weeds coming up. Premergence herbicides may get these, but it is doubtful. Be sure to start cultivation soon and cover as many weeds in the row as possible.

If you have not applied preemergence herbicide and plan to go over the top after corn is up, don't wait too long. Atrazine or atrozine + lasso should be applied before grass and weeds are beyond the 2 leaf stagage. Application by air is risky and expensive so plan your program wisely.

Grain sorghum cannot be planted if corn is lost and lasso was applied. On the other hand, soybeans cannot be planted if atrazine was applied. Your herbicide program is extremely important, so be sure to consider all factors before applying herbicides.

Most of the corn is up and growing good. Scott County farmers planted about 16,000 acres the past two years. I believe we have nearly 25,000 acres planted this year. Average yield per acre was 63 bushels in 1974 and 98 bushels in 1975. I hope for higher yields this year.

Several farmers have already started sidedressing or top-dressing nitrogen- this is a good idea. Early applied nitrogen will be converted to nitrate and ready for plant use when needed. Anhydrous ammonia is still the major source of N for corn, but liquid N, Urea, and ammonium nitrate are used on many acres. All four are excellent sources when applied at the same rate of actual N and correct method is used.

Placing nitrogen in the middles is sufficient. Be sure anhydrous is applied 6 to 8 inches deep. Anhydrous should not be used on soils that do not seal good. Considerable N will be lost. If N is topdressed by ground equipment an early application will burn corn leaves less than a later application. However, if burning does occur, it is only temporary and does not normally reduce yield. If liquid nitrogen is topdressed, it should be applied soon after corn has emerged. If solid nitrogen (ammonium nitrate or Urea) or liquid nitrogen are used to topdress cornwith, they should be cultivated into the soil soon after application unless ½" rain follows application within 24 hours. Apply 150 to 200 pounds of actual N per acre for irrigated corn and 125 to 150 if unirrigated.

A lot of fields will need a post-emergence application of 2, 4-D or similar material to control broadleaf weeds. Use ¼ to ½ pounds per acre of acid equivalent to control most annual broadleaved weeds. Use drops on ground equipment if corn is over 10 inches tall and weeds are shorter. Adjust nozzles so that the spray fans cross about 2½ inches above the tops of the weeds. This treatment is most effective on small weeds. Do not apply from the beginning of tasseling to the dough stage. 2, 4-D can cause temporary brittleness of corn stalks. If this occurs, the corn may be too brittle to be cultivated for about 7 to 10 days after application. Some varieties are more susceptible than others. Similar materials are: Banvel, Banvel +2, ½-D, and Lithate (a non-volatile form of 2, 4-D). Be sure to be very careful when applying 2, ½-D.

Black birds have been and still are a problem in many fields. I don't know of any legal recommended control measures.

By RICHARD F. McCINTOSH
Area Farm Management Specialist

BENTON — Farm machinery and equipment investments are high. From all indications, they will go even higher. A study of University of Missouri Mail-In-Record program cooperators for 1966 through 1975 revealed some interesting data on machinery and equipment.

Total machinery expenditures and book value data for 1975 indicate the average cooperator has about 500 crop acres. Over the years this average farmer has spent about $160 per crop acre for the machinery currently on his farm. The undepreciated value (often called book value or remaining value) is about $75 per crop acre or 47 per cent of the original cost basis. The book value may be below current resale value because of the rapid inflation in recent years. Since farmers depreciate machines over a period of years, the book value tends to lag behind machinery prices.

The annual depreciation on machinery in 1975 was about $15.67 per crop acre. This means machinery is being depreciated about 21 per cent per year.

Because of inflation, substitution of machinery for other inputs, etc. machinery purchases each year have been about 1.5 times estimated depreciation, or about 36 per cent of the beginning- of- year book value of machinery. New investments in machinery were about $24 per crop acre in 1975. Machinery investments on a per acre basis have about doubled since 1971.

These figures indicate what has happened on a per crop acre basis but that is only part of the picture. Farms have also increased in size. From 1966 to 1975 the average crop acres of farms in the mail-in-record program increased from 365 acres to 516 acres or about 41 per cent.

From all indications farms will continue to grow in size. The rate at which farmers are purchasing larger equipment indicates the substitution of capital in the form of machinery for labor has not stopped. Inflation is still with us and will probably continue (hopefully at a lower rate). The logical consequence will be a continued increase in machinery prices.

Since 1971, the change in book value of machinery has been plus 13 per cent from 1971 to 1972; plus 10 per cent from 1972 to 1973; plus 16 per cent from 1973 to 1974; and plus 12 per cent from 1974 to 1975. Indications are the USDA's machinery price index will increase 9 to 10 per cent from 1975 to 1976.

Machinery and equipment investments increase for many reasons. They may increase simply because more acres were added. However, on a per acre basis, they may increase because of inflation, substitution change in crops produced timeliness, or maybe just a desire to work less or keep up with a neighbor.

Are your machinery investments accomplishing your objectives? How do your machinery investments, costs, etc. compare to other farmers? You have the necessary information with your income tax report and depreciation schedule to see where you stand.

Determining the right planting rate will aid soybean harvest

By JOE H. SCOTT
State agronomy specialist

PORTAGEVILLE —Stands of cotton are being observed in southern part of the Bootheel, and soybean planting is getting off to an earlier start than usual and should be in full swing in a few days.

Last year, 1,460,000 acres were harvested in the Bootheel counties, with an average yield of around 27 bushels per acre.

Although the growers are hoping to do as well or better this year than in 1975, they will be trying to hold down losses from weeds and diseases.

Varieties have been selected to fit soil types and cut down on cyst nematode damage.

Determining the right planting rate will also aid in harvesting more beans per acre.

The Bootheel farmer has over 30 varieties to choose from when selecting a soybean to plant. One characteristic of soybean varieties is the difference in seed size. Some varieties may have very large seed while others have extremely small seed. The old rule of thumb "bushel per acre" seeding rate for soybeans may not work for you.

As a general rule, most growers tend to plant soybeans too thick. This practice can cost money in two ways: (1) planting more seed per acre than is actually needed means more money being spent for seed beans; and (2) soybeans planted too thick usually have a thin, spindly stalk and tend to lodge much more than those planted at lower rates.

Higher harvesting losses may occur in soybean fields that are badly lodged. So you can see, a farmer may lose money both at planting and harvest as a result of higher seeding rates than are necessary.

Using seed per foot of row to determine planting rate is the best method for getting the most desirable plant population per acre.

For an example, if a grower plants both York (large seeded variety) and Pickett 71 (small seeded variety), if he sets his planter for 45 pounds per acre for both York and Pickett 71 there will be quite a difference in actual seeding rates per foot of row. If he plants on 38-inch rows, York will be planted at the rate of eight seeds per foot of row while Pickett 71, with same setting, will plant 11 seeds per foot of row.

Many farmers have said that the York variety has less tendency to lodge than Pickett 71. Some of this difference can probably be attributed to the difference in seed size of the two varieties which gives two different plant populations at the same planter setting.

As a high seeding rate may be costly both at planting and harvest, the following steps are recommended: (1) plant seeds per foot of row-not pounds per acre; (2) check planter setting each time varieties are changed and adjust if necessary; (3) when planting seeds per foot of row, it is important to use good quality, high germinating seed; (4) consider soil type, soil crusting tendencies and possibly weed problems in determining what population to plant.

At the Delta Center, the normal planting rate is eight seeds per row-foot for 30-inch rows and 10 seeds per row-foot for 38-inch rows. However, each farming operation should be considered individually in determining optimum planting rates.

This chart should be helpful with seed of 90 per cent germination and above.

Lower soybean prices this year causes need for fertilizer, lime

BLOOMFIELD— The application of lime and fertilizer according to soil needs determined by a soil test will be extremely important this season, according to Tom Brown, area agronomy specialist for the Stoddard County University of Missouri Extension Center. The current price outlook for soybeans is not too favorable; therefore, it will behoove farmers to strive for the highest yield that it is practical to produce.

Fertilizer is important for soybeans as well as other crops. A 50-bushel yield of beans removes 40 pounds of phosphate and 70 pounds of potash compared to 50 pounds of phosphate and 35 pounds of potash removed from the soil by a 150-bushel yield of corn.

As this indicates, lots of plant food is removed from the soil by this crop, and bean yields as well as yields of other crops are low on many Stoddard County fields because beans have been produced so long with the application of little or no fertilizer.

Beans will respond very well to direct application of fertilizer on many fields in this area. For example, soybean yields were increased an average of six bushels per acre from the application of 60 pounds of potash per acre on 19 Southeast Missouri fields testing 150 pounds of potash or lower.

Likewise, bean yields were increased an average of three bushels per acre from the application of 60 pounds of phosphate per acre on eight fields in this area testing 100 pounds of phosphate or lower. Many fields in Stoddard County test below these levels of phosphate and potash.

Since the soybean is a legume, lime is necessary to the production of profitable yields of this crop. Lime not only adds plant nutrients to the soil which are important to soybean production, but it corrects the soil acidity which maximizes the effectiveness of phosphate, potash and other plant food elements necessary to the successful production of soybeans.

The application of lime and fertilizer are necessary if high-yield production of soybeans is to be accomplished. A soil test to guide their application is essential if maximum returns from money invested in fertilizer and lime are to be realized.

At least two to three weeks will be required for the farmer to receive his fertilizer and lime recommendations after he brings his soil samples to the University of Missouri Extension Center for testing. Consequently, farmers who do not have a recent soil test from all soybean fields should submit their samples for testing as soon as possible.

Govenor proclaims May as beef month

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has proclaimed May as Beef Month in Missouri, and efforts are being made to increase public awareness of the nutritional value of beef and the importance of the beef industry to Missouri's economy.

"Missouri beef producers have long been leaders in improving the quality of beef products available to all consumers," Bond said in his proclamation. Missouri ranks second in the nation in numbers of cows and calves. The beef industry accounts for 25 per cent of Missouri's total cash receipts from farming.

Present for the proclamation signing in the governor's office were James B. Boillot, director, Missouri Department of Agriculture; Junior Simpson of Salem, president, Missouri Cattlemen's Association; Mrs. Junior Simpson of Salem, president, Missouri CowBelles; Bill Sidwell of Queen City, chairman, Missouri Beef Industries Council; W. D. Richards of Keytesville, president, Missouri Livestock Feeders Association; and Jack Palmer of Fulton, commodity director, Missouri Farm Bureau.

After the proclamation signing, Mrs. Simpson presented Gov. Bond 10 choice steaks.

Soil moisture is improved by rains

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The soil moisture content of Missouri's farm fields improved last week but rain kept the state's farmers out of their fields much of the time.

The Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Monday that 75 per cent of the state's fields had adequate moisture at the end of the week and 8 per cent had surplus moisture—a vast improvement over the report a couple weeks earlier that much of the state had inadequate soil moisture.

Plowing was reported 93 per cent complete across the state, about two weeks ahead of normal for the period. The reporting service also said corn planting was 43 per cent complete, an increase of 8 per cent over the previous week and two weeks ahead of normal.

Cotton planting was reported 26 per cent complete, eight days ahead of normal, and about 7 per cent of the grain sorghum crop was planted by the end of last week. The reporting service said soybean planting started last week, and about 3 per cent of the crop was planted.

Problems were reported with alfalfa weevils in some local areas of northwest, north-central, southwest and south-central Missouri.

NEW FOOD

CLEMSON, S. C. (AP) — Dr. Jack Mitchell Jr., a bio-chemist at Clemson University, has come up with a brand new peanut product which he believes could become a worldwide food staple.

Peanuts are ground into white mush, made into a milky mixture by adding water, cooked, dried into thin sheets and crumbled or ground into flakes or powder.

Mitchell says the product is highly nutritious, cholesterol free, has a long storage life and a remarkable ability to take on the flavor of other food.

Agronomist lists herbicides soybeans

By THOMAS BROWN
Area agronomy specialist

BLOOMFIELD — Weeds take a heavy toll of the farmer's soybean yields and profits in this area each year. Herbicides, when selected in accordance with specific weed problems in each field and properly applied in combination with good cultural practices, will do much to prevent this loss of income by controlling weeds in this crop.

The following herbicides are recommended for preplant incorporated and surface-applied preemergency weed control treatments for soybeans.

Preplant treatments

Trifluralin (Treflan) provides excellent control of annual grasses and is effective against most small-seeded broadleaved weeds. It will not control large-seeded broadleaved weeds including cocklebur, morning glory, jimsonweed, ragweed, velvet leaf and teaweed.

This chemical should be applied before planting and incorporated into the upper two inches of soil as soon as practicable (within eight hours). Trifluralin requires less moisture than most herbicides for effective weed control.

Butralin (Amex), fluchloralin (Basalin), dinitramine (Cobex), penoxalin (Prowl) and profluralin (Tolban) are relatively new herbicides which have label clearance for use on soybeans. They are all chemically similar to trifluralin and produce similar weed control results to this herbicide.

Vernolate (Vernam) gives good control of annual grasses and is effective against wild cane and Johnson grass seedlings.

Pre-emergency treatments

Alachlor (Lasso) is recommended for the control of most annual grasses including late-season fall panicum and gives satisfactory control of pigweed. It does not leach as readily as some herbicides, therefore, it is effective under high rainfall conditions. It is an excellent chemical to use in combination with herbicides which are effective against a wide variety of broadleaved weeds.

Linuron (Lorox) is effective in the control of several annual grasses and broadleaved weeds common to this area. It provides only fair control of cocklebur, jimsonweed, morning glory and teaweed and poor control of nutgrass and Johnson grass seedlings.

Its safety margin between good weed control and crop injury is narrow; therefore, care should be taken to select the proper application rate in accordance with soil conditions and to carefully calibrate the sprayer to apply the proper amount. No single application rate can be safely used in fields having major variations in soil type.

Linuron should not be used on sandy soils or heavy soils with over four per cent organic matter. It performs well in mixtures with other herbicides.

Metribuzin (Sencor or Lanex) provides good control of most annual grasses and small-seeded broadleaved weeds and some large seeded ones, including cocklebur, jimsonweed, smartweed, velvetleaf, ragweed and teaweed. It does not always control deep seeded cocklebur and morning glory as well as barnyardgrass.

Its safety margin is also narrow so the safety precautions outlined for Linuron should also be observed in the use of metribuzin. It has also performed well in mixtures with other herbicides.

Alachlor + linuron (Lasso + Lorox) combined is effective against a wide variety of grasses and broadleaved weeds. Precuations outlined for linuron should also be observed when applying this mixture.

Alacnlor + metribuzin (Lasso + Sencor or Lexone) also controls a wide variety of grasses and broadleaved weeds. Precautions suggested for metribuzin should also be observed when applying this combination.

Incorporated plus Pre-emergence

A surface-applied pre-emergency application of either Metribuzin (Sencor) or linuron (Lorox) during or following the planting operation after a preplant incorporated treatment of trifluralin (Treflan) has been applied will result in the control of a wider variety of grasses and broadleaved weeds than that provided by either chemical involved used alone. Such a combination of herbicides could prove profitable in many cases.

More detailed information pertaining to chemical weed control for soybeans, including recommended rates of application, may be obtained from county University of Missouri Extension Centers.

SeMo dairy summary given

PERRYVILLE — Elton Koch's dairy of Uniontown won recognition as high dairy herd and also had the top producing cow for the month of March. According to dairy herd improvement computer summaries received in the University of Missouri Extension Center here, the Koch herd averaged 1.9 pounds butterfat in 47.8 pounds milk daily.

The Perry County Dairy Herd Improvement Association's records, supervised by fieldman Gary Dobblelare, show Herbert Kramer of Uniontown in second place with 1.8 pounds butterfat in 48.2 pounds milk. Third went to Jo-Ke-Mo herd of St. Marys with production of 1.7 pounds butterfat in 46.3 pounds milk.

Palmer Fritsche of Perryville held fourth place with 1.7 pounds butterfat in 43.6 pounds milk, followed by Chalmer Voelker's Brown Swiss of St. Marys with 1.7 pounds butterfat in 40.5 pounds milk. All averages include dry cows. Carl Todt, fieldman for Southeast Association, shows the James Dairy of Cape Girardeau in first position with an average of 1.6 pounds butterfat in 42.6 pounds milk. Siemers Farms, Inc. of Gordonville was a close second with 1.6 pounds butterfat in 42.2 pounds milk, followed closely by Midway Dairy Farms of Cape Girardeau with 1.6 pounds butterfat in 42 pounds milk.

Southeast Missouri University Farms of Cape Girardeau tallied 1.5 pounds butterfat in 46.3 pounds milk for fourth ranking, followed by Clem Schabbing of Cape Girardeau with 1.5 pounds butterfat in 33.8 pounds milk.

Eugene Kollmeyer of Farmington took first honors in the St. Francois County Association, according to supervisor Althea Elfrink. The Kollmeyer cows gave 1.4 pounds butterfat in 38.5 pounds milk.

Ches-Nan Dairy of Farmington came in second with 1.3 pounds butterfat in 35.4 pounds milk, followed by Govro Brothers of Farmington with 1.1 pounds butterfat in 31 pounds milk. Counts-Bouchard Dairy of Bonne Terre took fourth spot with 1.1 pounds butterfat in 30.5 pounds milk. Robert Hager, also of Bonne Terre, was fifth with one pound butterfat in 29.2 pounds milk.

Top cow for the area was Jane of the Koch Dairy with a whopping 3.8 pounds butterfat in 114.3 pounds milk. Polly, of the Harvey Nischwitz herd of Gordonville, placed second in the Perry County Association with 3.9 pounds butterfat in 96 pounds milk.

Third and fourth were Topsy and Patches, also of the Koch Dairy, with 3.6 pounds butterfat in 88.8 pounds milk and 3.5 pounds butterfat in 84.5 pounds milk, respectively. No. 14 of the Russell Brandes herd of Uniontown was fifth high with a respectable 3.1 pounds butterfat in 78.5 pounds milk.

No. 1 producer in the Southeast Association was reported by Ronnie Voshage, herdsman for Southeast Missouri University Dairy. Holstein No. 3 of the University herd pumped out 3.5 pounds butterfat in 111.8 pounds milk.

Second, third and fourth place animals, reported by the Clem Schabbing Dairy, were No. 303 with 3.1 pounds butterfat in 90.1 pounds milk, No. 316 with 2.9 pounds butterfat in 95.8 pounds milk and No. 300 with 2.8 pounds butterfat in 78.3 pounds milk.

Two cows tied for fifth place -- Dafney of the Joe Kirchdoerfer herd of Cape Girardeau and No. 122 of the Clem Schabbing herd with 2.7 pounds butterfat in 54.3 pounds milk.

The Ches-Nan Dairy reported the high five cows in the St. Francois Association. They are: Lizza, with 2.8 pounds butterfat in 73.5 pounds milk; Grams, with 2.5 pounds butterfat in 66.6 pounds milk; Samtha, with two pounds butterfat in 56 pounds milk; Peachy, with two pounds butterfat in 54 pounds milk; and Honey, with 1.8 pounds butterfat in 56.8 pounds milk.

Cows on dairy herd improvement records in Missouri produce approximately 2,500 pounds more milk per year than the average Missouri cow. At $8.50 per hundred weight of milk, this amounts to around $215 more gross income annually or over $10,000 extra for a herd of 50 cows.

Also, hundreds of dollars can be saved yearly on feed that is wasted on "boarder" cows by using DHIA records. Dairymen interested in improving profits through records should contact their local University of Missouri Extension Center or their DHIA fieldman.

Bicentennial Day:

It was a day for a mingling of the young, old and in-between. It was a day for learning, laughing and remembering. But most of all, it was a day to share in some of the things that have become a part of America in the past two hundred years.

The Matthews School held a Bicentennial Day Thursday. Exhibits were set up to illustrate cooking, handicrafts and antique items that are still very much a part of our lives in this country today.

There were: antique cars, dolls, quilts, rugs, telephones, old books, fresh bread dough, newly- churned butter and several period costumes.

Local residents explained the exhibits and activities to interested observers. Matthews school students from grades one through 12 were there, and many adults also came.

The rhythm band from the Sikeston Heritage House played and danced for the crowd. The young were entertained by the old and vise-versa as the nation's 200th birthday came to life for many.

Sharing a heritage.

Lee Price of New Madrid makes use of an old crock and kraut cutter to shred cabbage for sauer kraut.

Fran Morrison of Sikeston gives a preliminary macrame lesson to Mae Gregory of Morehouse.

Carl Wilson, music director of Matthews takes Wanda Rowland, also of Matthews, for a spin around the stage as the Heritage House rhythm band of Sikeston plays.

The audience found a willing and able entertainer in Minnie Sutton of the Heritage House, who danced in a period costume.

Southeast Missouri Agronomist explains

Determining the right planting rate will aid soybean harvest

By JOE H. SCOTT
State agronomy specialist

PORTAGEVILLE —Stands of cotton are being observed in southern part of the Bootheel, and soybean planting is getting off to an earlier start than usual and should be in full swing in a few days.

Last year, 1,460,000 acres were harvested in the Bootheel counties, with an average yield of around 27 bushels per acre.

Although the growers are hoping to do as well or better this year than in 1975, they will be trying to hold down losses from weeds and diseases.

Varieties have been selected to fit soil types and cut down on cyst nematode damage.

Determining the right planting rate will also aid in harvesting more beans per acre.

The Bootheel farmer has over 30 varieties to choose from when selecting a soybean to plant. One characteristic of soybean varieties is the difference in seed size. Some varieties may have very large seed while others have extremely small seed. The old rule of thumb "bushel per acre" seeding rate for soybeans may not work for you.

As a general rule, most growers tend to plant soybeans too thick. This practice can cost money in two ways: (1) planting more seed per acre than is actually needed means more money being spent for seed beans; and (2) soybeans planted too thick usually have a thin, spindly stalk and tend to lodge much more than those planted at lower rates.

Higher harvesting losses may occur in soybean fields that are badly lodged. So you can see, a farmer may lose money both at planting and harvest as a result of higher seeding rates than are necessary.

Using seed per foot of row to determine planting rate is the best method for getting the most desirable plant population per acre.

For an example, if a grower plants both York (large seeded variety) and Pickett 71 (small seeded variety), if he sets his planter for 45 pounds per acre for both York and Pickett 71 there will be quite a difference in actual seeding rates per foot of row. If he plants on 38-inch rows, York will be planted at the rate of eight seeds per foot of row while Pickett 71, with same setting, will plant 11 seeds per foot of row.

Many farmers have said that the York variety has less tendency to lodge than Pickett 71. Some of this difference can probably be attributed to the difference in seed size of the two varieties which gives two different plant populations at the same planter setting.

As a high seeding rate may be costly both at planting and harvest, the following steps are recommended: (1) plant seeds per foot of row-not pounds per acre; (2) check planter setting each time varieties are changed and adjust if necessary; (3) when planting seeds per foot of row, it is important to use good quality, high germinating seed; (4) consider soil type, soil crusting tendencies and possibly weed problems in determining what population to plant.

At the Delta Center, the normal planting rate is eight seeds per row-foot for 30-inch rows and 10 seeds per row-foot for 38-inch rows. However, each farming operation should be considered individually in determining optimum planting rates.

This chart should be helpful with seed of 90 per cent germination and above.

Lower soybean prices this year causes need for fertilizer, lime

BLOOMFIELD— The application of lime and fertilizer according to soil needs determined by a soil test will be extremely important this season, according to Tom Brown, area agronomy specialist for the Stoddard County University of Missouri Extension Center. The current price outlook for soybeans is not too favorable; therefore, it will behoove farmers to strive for the highest yield that it is practical to produce.

Fertilizer is important for soybeans as well as other crops. A 50-bushel yield of beans removes 40 pounds of phosphate and 70 pounds of potash compared to 50 pounds of phosphate and 35 pounds of potash removed from the soil by a 150-bushel yield of corn.

As this indicates, lots of plant food is removed from the soil by this crop, and bean yields as well as yields of other crops are low on many Stoddard County fields because beans have been produced so long with the application of little or no fertilizer.

Beans will respond very well to direct application of fertilizer on many fields in this area. For example, soybean yields were increased an average of six bushels per acre from the application of 60 pounds of potash per acre on 19 Southeast Missouri fields testing 150 pounds of potash or lower.

Likewise, bean yields were increased an average of three bushels per acre from the application of 60 pounds of phosphate per acre on eight fields in this area testing 100 pounds of phosphate or lower. Many fields in Stoddard County test below these levels of phosphate and potash.

Since the soybean is a legume, lime is necessary to the production of profitable yields of this crop. Lime not only adds plant nutrients to the soil which are important to soybean production, but it corrects the soil acidity which maximizes the effectiveness of phosphate, potash and other plant food elements necessary to the successful production of soybeans.

The application of lime and fertilizer are necessary if high-yield production of soybeans is to be accomplished. A soil test to guide their application is essential if maximum returns from money invested in fertilizer and lime are to be realized.

At least two to three weeks will be required for the farmer to receive his fertilizer and lime recommendations after he brings his soil samples to the University of Missouri Extension Center for testing. Consequently, farmers who do not have a recent soil test from all soybean fields should submit their samples for testing as soon as possible.

Swine pavilion to be improved

SEDALIA — About $80,000 in structural improvements were started this month on the swine pavilion at the Missouri State Fair. Work is tentatively scheduled for completion May 17.

Nearly two acres of new roofing are being placed on the 54-year-old structure. Other improvements recently completed or now under way include a redesigned show arena, a new office, repaired pens, new paint and removal of the stairs and balcony on the northeast corner of the building.

The renovated structure will host the National Duroc Congress July21-23 and will be used during the 1976 Missouri State Fair, scheduled Aug. 20-29.

Soil moisture is improved by rains

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The soil moisture content of Missouri's farm fields improved last week but rain kept the state's farmers out of their fields much of the time.

The Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Monday that 75 per cent of the state's fields had adequate moisture at the end of the week and 8 per cent had surplus moisture—a vast improvement over the report a couple weeks earlier that much of the state had inadequate soil moisture.

Plowing was reported 93 per cent complete across the state, about two weeks ahead of normal for the period. The reporting service also said corn planting was 43 per cent complete, an increase of 8 per cent over the previous week and two weeks ahead of normal.

Cotton planting was reported 26 per cent complete, eight days ahead of normal, and about 7 per cent of the grain sorghum crop was planted by the end of last week. The reporting service said soybean planting started last week, and about 3 per cent of the crop was planted.

Problems were reported with alfalfa weevils in some local areas of northwest, north-central, southwest and south-central Missouri.

NEW FOOD

CLEMSON, S. C. (AP) — Dr. Jack Mitchell Jr., a bio-chemist at Clemson University, has come up with a brand new peanut product which he believes could become a worldwide food staple.

Peanuts are ground into white mush, made into a milky mixture by adding water, cooked, dried into thin sheets and crumbled or ground into flakes or powder.

Mitchell says the product is highly nutritious, cholesterol free, has a long storage life and a remarkable ability to take on the flavor of other food.

Wooden mixing spoon should not be soaked

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I do hope you or some reader can tell me how to properly care for wooden mixing spoons. So much has been said about cutting boards and utensils and the bacteria and germs that can lurk on them. I use my wooden spoons so much, but I hate to soak them as they get soft. Is it advisable to use bleach when washing them? —HELEN.

DEAR HELEN — Never put such spoons in your dishwasher. They usually only need to be wiped off or rinsed with cold water and thoroughly dried. Keep away from the heat and use as little water as possible. They might be kept wrapped in foil or plastic wrap between use, if afraid of germs. Any cleaning should be done immediately after use so the wood does not absorb odors from whatever it has been in contact with. If a scrubbing is needed use soap and lukewarm water and then rinse with cold water. Drying is always important and never leave such spoons to soak in water. —POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My husband installed a window shade behind my built-in stove. I always pull it down before doing any frying. Now my wall covering is just like new and only needs an occasional wiping off. All my friends thought this such a good idea that I should share it with others. —MRS.H.E.D.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns little children, mothers with babies and the aged who all tire quickly and easily when shopping. I wonder why stores, shopping centers and super-markets do not have good hardwood chairs or seats scattered about, so that people can get a little weight off their feet and then do a better and more intelligent job of shopping. —G.K.B.

DEAR POLLY — My idea is for anyone having an unused small suitcase or attache case. I keep all my packaged or folded gift wrapping paper in the pocket in the top of such a case. The bottom holds ribbon, cards, tape and a small pair of scissors. Everything is in one place and this case takes up very little space laid flat on a closet shelf with storage space on top of it. —G.H.

Calley to marry

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — William L. Calley Jr. plans to marry the daughter of a prominent Columbus jeweler May 15, friends of the couple say.

Penny Vick, 29, a buyer for her father's jewelry store, has been engaged to Calley, 32, for more than a year.

The former U.S. Army lieutenant has lived in Columbus since his 1971 court-martial conviction for the murder of 22 civilians at My Lai in South Vietnam.

The U.S. Supreme Court has refused to review his sentence, but the Army has said he will not be jailed.

Anne Moore, the young redhaired woman who visited Calley almost daily during his trial and three years of house arrest at Ft. Benning, has since married and moved to south Georgia.

Washing Laundry in Warm Water Cuts Utility Bills

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Can the energy-conscious homemaker help cut her utility bills in the laundry room?

Yes, indeed, says a report issued by the Consumers Institute for General Electric and Hotpoint based here.

The answer is to shift from washing everything in hot water and giving it a warm water rinse, to washing in warm water (at least 80 degrees F) and rinsing in cold water, says Jane Butel, manager of the Consumers Institute.

For the typical homemaker who does 410 wash loads a year (that's right — some 34 a month is average), the switch from hot wash-warm rinse to warm wash-cold rinse will save about 7,100 gallons of hot water annually.

Translating that into dollars and cents, if you heat water electrically you could save up to $55 a year on electricity. That's figuring the cost at the projected national average of 3.4c kwhr— which is considerably below the going rate in many areas, such as the mid-Atlantic states and Florida.

Even if you heat with natural gas, you'll save about $11 a year (at 15c per 100 cu. ft.). But, just as important, says Mrs. Butel, you'll be developing a habit which will pay off as gas prices keep rising, or should you later move to an area where new natural gas hookups are banned.

"Many consumers can use lower wash temperatures and still obtain very adequate cleaning," says Mrs. Butel. Laboratory tests, she says, show that cleaning increases only slightly as water temperatures go above 80 degrees.

Bicentennial Day:

Sharing a heritage

It was a day for a mingling of the young, old and in-between. It was a day for learning, laughing and remembering. But most of all, it was a day to share in some of the things that have become a part of America in the past two hundred years.

The Matthews School held a Bicentennial Day Thursday. Exhibits were set up to illustrate cooking, handicrafts and antique items that are still very much a part of our lives in this country today.

There were: antique cars, dolls, quilts, rugs, telephones, old books, fresh bread dough, newly- churned butter and several period costumes.

Local residents explained the exhibits and activities to interested observers. Matthews school students from grades one through 12 were there, and many adults also came.

The rhythm band from the Sikeston Heritage House played and danced for the crowd. The young were entertained by the old and vise-versa as the nation's 200th birthday came to life for many.

Sharing a heritage.

Lee Price of New Madrid makes use of an old crock and kraut cutter to shred cabbage for sauer kraut.

Fran Morrison of Sikeston gives a preliminary macrame lesson to Mae Gregory of Morehouse.

Carl Wilson, music director of Matthews takes Wanda Rowland, also of Matthews, for a spin around the stage as the Heritage House rhythm band of Sikeston plays.

The audience found a willing and able entertainer in Minnie Sutton of the Heritage House, who danced in a period costume.

TOFFEE CHIFFON PIE

For a light, but oh-so-lovely finale to your springtime or summer party menus, try this tasty Toffee Chiffon Pie. The flavor surprise in this frothy dessert is the crunchy goodness of English Toffee Candy, nestled into the luscious filling to crown the top of this tempting treat.

A perfect dessert for special occasions, Toffee Chiffon Pie is easy enough to prepare that it can be served for family meals.

½ cup cold water
3 eggs, separated
1 ½ cups milk
½ cup brown sugar, packed
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup (6 ounces) chopped Heath English Toffee candy bars
¼ cup granulated sugar
1 envelope (2 ounces) whipped dessert topping
1 9-inch baked pastry or favorite crumb pie shell, chilled

Soften gelatin in cold water. Beat egg yolks slightly. Add 1 cup milk, brown sugar, salt; stir. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until mixture coats a spoon. Add softened gelatin; stir until it melts. Blend in Vanilla and ¾ cup candy bits. Chill until mixture starts to "set." Beat egg whites until frothy; add sugar gradually, continuing to beat until stiff and glossy. Fold into gelatin mixture. Prepare dessert topping as directed on package using remaining ½ cup milk. Fold into gelatin and egg white mixture. Pour into chilled crust. Sprinkle with remaining ¼ cup candy bits, or more if desired. Chill until firm.

A quick 'n easy way to chop Toffee Candy is to freeze candy bars first, then crush with blender, good grinder, grater or chopper, or wrap bars in waxed paper or cloth and crush with a rolling pin.

Contract language confusing

By VIRGINIA KNAUER
Special Assistant to the President and Director
Office of Consumer Affairs
Department of Health, Education and Welfare

On the day that you decide to buy a residence—whether it be a house, townhouse, apartment or even a mobile home—you will be asked to sign a sales contract and other legal documents that may seem like they were written in a foreign language.

Before you sign these documents, know what they mean. According to the National Association of Homebuilders (NAHB), the seller is not under legal obligation to do anything not covered in these documents.

The sales agreement you sign describes the property, states the purchase price, explains the method of payment and usually names the date and place where the "closing" or actual transfer of the property will occur. Also known as a deposit receipt in western states, this contract binds you legally to buying the home exactly as it is described in the document. Therefore, before you sign anything or hand over a deposit, go over the contract carefully and make sure you understand and agree with its provisions.

Besides understanding the sales contract and other documents you will be asked to sign, it's also a good idea to know what kind of expenses will be involved in the sale of a home. In addition to "closing" costs—which cover such items as application fees, credit reports, property surveys, title search and examination, title insurance, and miscellaneous fees for drawing up the mortgage documents—there are also a number of payments ("home ownership expenses") that you will probably have to make:

Utility charges—depending upon the community, you may be assessed a connection or tie-in fee or advance payment by the local utility companies.

Real estate taxes—most home mortgages require that each month's payment include some money to be set aside in an escrow account for real estate taxes. When your taxes come due, the mortgage lender then pays them out of this account.

Hazard insurance—you will probably be asked to pay for insurance to protect against damages to the property caused by fire, windstorm or other hazards. This insurance is designed to protect the lender's investment in your unit and, therefore, differs from a homeowner's insurance policy that you would get for yourself. Often the money used to pay for hazard insurance comes from the same escrow account explained above.

To give you more information about settlement costs, Housing & Urban Development Dept. (HUD) has published a fact sheet (163 D) which you can get free from Consumer Information, Pueblo, CO. 81009.

Ann Landers

Teen-age bride regrets marriage

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this for all the teens who are planning on getting married this year.

At 16, I married my "dream man". At 18, when my high school friends were receiving their diplomas I was at home, folding diapers for two. Some of my girl friends said they envied me, but little did they know how much I envied THEM. I was too ashamed to admit that my dream man was spending more evenings away from home than with me.

A year later we were fed up with each other. I couldn't take his running around and he couldn't take my nagging.

All you teenagers who think marriage means "romance forever" are kidding yourselves. First, there's the money problem. When we were dating there was always enough for pizza, movies, picnics, whatever we wanted to do. After we married, the bills began to pile up. We didn't know where they came from.

You think a baby will help keep him home. Well, it keeps YOU home, but it pushes HIM out. He'd rather be drinking beer with his buddies. Crying babies make him "nervous."

I wish I had finished high school. I could express my feelings better. I feel half-educated and--Messed Up At 19

Dear 19: You expressed your feelings quite eloquently, and I thank you. Any high school dropout who wishes to get a diploma can do it if he (or she) is willing to work for it. Call your high school principal and ask about the alternaives--there are several. And good luck to you, dear.

Dear Ann: My husband and I owned a small farm and worked together to make it go. We made the old equipment do and lived a conservative, quiet life so we could give our children the best of everything.

Six years ago, my husband passed away suddenly. I was 45. Somehow I managed to pull myself together and carry on alone. Two years later I met a wonderful man who made me want to live live again. Ralph and I were married.

My 16-yer-old son was happy for me. He liked Ralph very much, but the 23-year-old son is another story. He is a college graduate, lives away from home, has a fine job and is debt-free. He has nice friends and a pleasant life, but he can't stand the sight of his stepfather. He did everything under the sun to keep me from marrying.

Now he says I must choose between Ralph and him. He refuses to come to see me unless I assure him that Ralph is out of the house. If there is a family party he will not attend unless I agree in advance to come without Ralph. Sometimes I think I'll go crazy trying to decide what to do. Ralph has been very patient, but how long can he put up with this insolence? I love my son and don't want to lose him. Will you please tell me what to do?--Torn

Dear Torn: Your son is already lost. Moveover, he is a selfish, punitive young man who could use some professonal help.

Tell him you're sorry he feels so strongly about Ralph, but you will not ask your husband to leave the house, nor will you exclude him from family affairs. Let your son know the door will always be open, but since he insists that you make a choice, you must choose your husband.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious--lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers's booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-adressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

If a scrubbing is needed use soap and lukewarm water and then rinse with cold water. Drying is always important and never leave such spoons to soak in water. —POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My husband installed a window shade behind my built-in stove. I always pull it down before doing any frying. Now my wall covering is just like new and only needs an occasional wiping off. All my friends thought this such a good idea that I should share it with others. —MRS.H.E.D.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns little children, mothers with babies and the aged who all tire quickly and easily when shopping. I wonder why stores, shopping centers and super-markets do not have good hardwood chairs or seats scattered about, so that people can get a little weight off their feet and then do a better and more intelligent job of shopping. —G.K.B.

DEAR POLLY — My idea is for anyone having an unused small suitcase or attache case. I keep all my packaged or folded gift wrapping paper in the pocket in the top of such a case. The bottom holds ribbon, cards, tape and a small pair of scissors. Everything is in one place and this case takes up very little space laid flat on a closet shelf with storage space on top of it. —G.H.

Calley to marry

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — William L. Calley Jr. plans to marry the daughter of a prominent Columbus jeweler May 15, friends of the couple say.

Penny Vick, 29, a buyer for her father's jewelry store, has been engaged to Calley, 32, for more than a year.

The former U.S. Army lieutenant has lived in Columbus since his 1971 court-martial conviction for the murder of 22 civilians at My Lai in South Vietnam.

The U.S. Supreme Court has refused to review his sentence, but the Army has said he will not be jailed.

Anne Moore, the young red-haired woman who visited Calley almost daily during his trial and three years of house arrest at Ft. Benning, has since married and moved to south Georgia.

Washing Laundry in Warm Water Cuts Utility Bills

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Can the energy-conscious homemaker help cut her utility bills in the laundry room?

Yes, indeed, says a report issued by the Consumers Institute for General Electric and Hotpoint based here.

The answer is to shift from washing everything in hot water and giving it a warm water rinse, to washing in warm water (at least 80 degrees F) and rinsing in cold water, says Jane Butel, manager of the Consumers Institute.

For the typical homemaker who does 410 wash loads a year (that's right — some 34 a month is average), the switch from hot wash-warm rinse to warm wash-cold rinse will save about 7,100 gallons of hot water annually.

Translating that into dollars and cents, if you heat water electrically you could save up to $55 a year on electricity. That's figuring the cost at the projected national average of 3.4c kwhr— which is considerably below the going rate in many areas, such as the mid-Atlantic states and Florida.

Even if you heat with natural gas, you'll save about $11 a year (at 15c per 100 cu. ft.). But, just as important, says Mrs. Butel, you'll be developing a habit which will pay off as gas prices keep rising, or should you later move to an area where new natural gas hookups are banned.

"Many consumers can use lower wash temperatures and still obtain very adequate cleaning," says Mrs. Butel. Laboratory tests, she says, show that cleaning increases only slightly as water temperatures go above 80 degrees.

Fetal Monitoring Helps Cut Childbirth Problems

NEW HYDE PARK, N. Y. (AP) — "Do you want to hear my baby's heart beating?" asked the young father-to-be standing alongside his wife's bed in the obstetrics section of Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center.

He switched on a bedside recording instrument and a "beeping" sound echoed the rhythmic beating of their unborn baby's heart.

From the moment she was admitted to the medical center's labor room, the young wife and unborn baby were being guarded by an advanced technique of fetal monitoring. Detection devices placed on her abdomen were connected to a moving graph. The indicator traced sharp peaks to show each of the mother's contractions as the baby moved through the birth canal. Jagged, wavering lines recorded the beating heart of the fetus.

In most cases, childbirth goes smoothly. But if the fetal heartbeat shows a pattern of faltering or irregularity, the staff of the labor room instantly swing into action.

The obstetrician draws a tiny drop of blood from the unborn baby's scalp. Laboratory technicians test the blood's acidity level. Increasing acidity means that the fetus is not getting enough oxygen — that it is figuratively gasping. If this happens, delivery by cesarean section can be under way in less than five minutes.

Speed is essential since many types of congenital brain damage, and neurological problems such as cerebral palsy, are now known to be due to oxygen deprivation in the fetus.

Dr. Joseph J. Rovinsky, chairman of the hospital's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, points out that "continuous monitoring means that the mother and baby are being electronically safeguarded all the time. No one can predict the precise moment a normal pregnancy and labor might turn into a disaster. The combined technique of scalp testing and fetal monitoring is the highest level of safety available currently."

The program now in use at the hospital can detect most cases of an unborn child in serious difficulty. This is seen as a major step towards cutting down on stillbirths and assuring newborns of the maximum chance for normal, healthy lives.

Marmalade Goes Into Dessert

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

When there's a jar of orange marmalade on hand you can make one of the most delightful desserts — Marmalade Meringue. It originated many years ago and was cooked in a double-boiler and served hot. Now we find it may be made another way — in the oven — and this way it benefits from being served chilled. If you welcome delicate desserts to prepare ahead, the chances are you'll appreciate this version.

MARMALADE MERINGUE

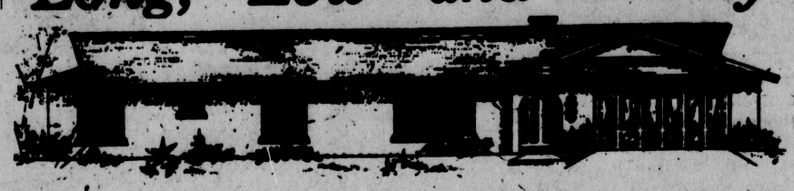
4 egg whites
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
½ cup orange marmalade
1 teaspoon vanilla
Custard Sauce, see below
6 membrane-free fresh orange slices

Beat egg whites and salt until they form tilted peaks; gradually beat in the sugar until they form stiff peaks. Fold in the marmalade and the vanilla. Turn into six 6-ounce custard cups placed in a 13 by 9 by 2 inch baking pan. Add enough boiling water to the pan to come up about ¾-inch. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until golden — about 15 minutes. Remove cups to a wire rack and let stand until cool — the meringues will sink. Chill. With a small metal spatula loosen edges and unmold. Serve with Custard Sauce and garnish with the orange. Makes 6 servings.

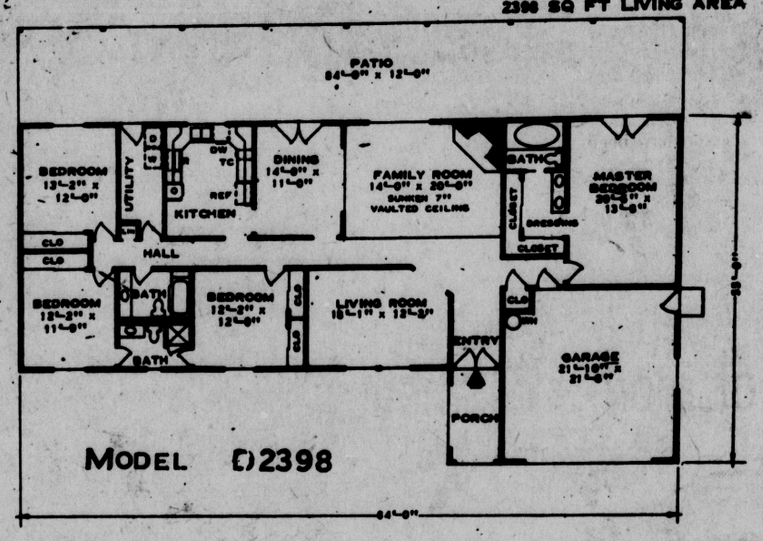
Custard Sauce: In the top of a double-boiler over direct heat, scald 2 cups milk. Beat together 4 egg yolks, ¼ cup sugar and ⅛ teaspoon salt just until combined; gradually but vigorously whisk in about half the milk. Return to double-boiler top. Stirring constantly, cook over hot water until slightly thickened and mixture forms a straight line across a silver spoon. At once place over very cold water to stop the cooking and stir in 1 teaspoon vanilla. Chill. Makes about 2 cups.

MARMALADE MERINGUE—It's delicate, delicious and delightful as well as kind to the budget.

Long, Low and Lovely



2398 SQ FT LIVING AREA



Long, low and lovely to look at with eye-pleasing exterior lines, this four bedroom, three bath design offers a graciously simple floor plan spiced with imaginative, yet practical, touches.

Take a look, for example, at the attractive entrance porch treatment and the paneling detail on the double front doors and the garage doors, as well.

Then step inside where the practical entry offers an immediate view of a fabulous back-of-the-house family room. Sunken a full seven inches, and further dramatized by a vaulted ceiling, this large, made-to-be-lived-in room, with its distinctive corner fireplace, opens onto the huge, length-of-the-house rear patio.

Up a wide step, the adjacent dining room shares in the sense of drama and has its own patio entrance, too.

The kitchen of this plan has a U-shaped work area, chock full of cupboards, and there's a large utility-laundry room right beside it, handy also as a rear service entryway.

At this end of the house are three full-sized bedrooms, two of which share a "convenient semi-private bath which backs up—for plumbing efficiency—to the main bath, just off the bedroom hallway.

At the opposite end of the house, privately separate for maximum tranquility, is the large, luxurious master bedroom. This delightful retreat has a huge bath, dressing and closet area and its own double doors to that long, lovely patio. And it is just a handy step away from the inside garage entrance, too.

Study this plan carefully, noting the gracious living features it provides throughout all of its nearly 2,400 square foot living area. If you demand practicality, but have a yen for luxury, too, this model could be just what you are looking for.

First job interview vital for seeker

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — With more than 1,200,000 college graduates this spring expected to enter a U.S. job market already experiencing a high unemployment rate, the make-or-break step for many job seekers will be the initial interview, says the manager of corporate employment for one of the nation's top 50 companies.

"There are many things that may determine whether or not a job candidate is successful. But if an applicant does well in the initial interview, it greatly improves the chance that he or she will be hired," said Charles Jennings, of R. J. Reynolds Industries here.

Jennings and two members of his staff, Joe Carideo, personnel supervisor, and Denis Simon, personnel representative, handle 1,200 to 1,500 job interviews each year. They offered the following suggestions on how to get an interview and how to handle it once you make it through the door:

—First contact with a company is often a resume. Prepare it as though it were a written interview on your qualifications and experience. Find out about the company and the requirements of the job you are applying for, then tailor the resume to emphasize your qualifications.

—Do not write to an officer of the company expecting to make an impression. Such letters are almost always sent to the personnel department as a matter of routine.

—Before going to an interview, do a thorough check on the company. Find out about its products and services, and particular problems or opportunities it may have in your field. When a person takes time to prepare for an interview, it's a good indication he or she will show the same initiative on the job.

—Plan how you are going to answer certain questions. Most interviewers ask a number of routine questions about your general background and job experience. Use your knowledge of the company to plan honest answers that will show how your experience relates to the company's needs.

—Above all, be yourself. Present your personality and skills honestly, both in the interview and on paper. Almost all companies check references and other information on applications thoroughly, and any discrepancies can hurt your chances.

—Take work samples if you feel they will demonstrate skills.

—If possible, indicate how your educational preparation and past jobs have furthered your career goals. Working toward goals in a logical manner rather than changing jobs every year or two strictly for financial gain makes an impression.

TOFFEE CHIFFON PIE

For a light, but oh-so-lovely finale to your springtime or summer party menus, try this tasty Toffee Chiffon Pie. The flavor surprise in this frothy dessert is the crunchy goodness of English Toffee Candy, nestled into the luscious filling to crown the top of this tempting treat.

A perfect dessert for special occasions, Toffee Chiffon Pie is easy enough to prepare that it can be served for family meals.

½ cup cold water
3 eggs, separated
1 ½ cups milk
½ cup brown sugar, packed
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup (6 ounces) chopped Heath English Toffee candy bars
¼ cup granulated sugar
1 envelope (2 ounces) whipped dessert topping
1 9-inch baked pastry or favorite crumb pie shell, chilled

Soften gelatin in cold water. Beat egg yolks slightly. Add 1 cup milk, brown sugar, salt; stir. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until mixture coats a spoon. Add softened gelatin; stir until it melts. Blend in Vanilla and ¾ cup candy bits. Chill until mixture starts to "set." Beat egg whites until frothy; add sugar gradually, continuing to beat until stiff and glossy. Fold into gelatin mixture. Prepare dessert topping as directed on package using remaining ½ cup milk. Fold into gelatin and egg white mixture. Pour into chilled crust. Sprinkle with remaining ¼ cup candy bits, or more if desired. Chill until firm.

A quick 'n easy way to chop Toffee Candy is to freeze candy bars first, then crush with blender, good grinder, grater or chopper, or wrap bars in waxed paper or cloth and crush with a rolling pin.

Contract language confusing

By VIRGINIA KNAUER
Special Assistant to the President and Director
Office of Consumer Affairs
Department of Health, Education and Welfare

On the day that you decide to buy a residence—whether it be a house, townhouse, apartment or even a mobile home—you will be asked to sign a sales contract and other legal documents that may seem like they were written in a foreign language.

Before you sign these documents, know what they mean. According to the National Association of Homebuilders, (NAHB), the seller is not under legal obligation to do anything not covered in these documents.

The sales agreement you sign describes the property, states the purchase price, explains the method of payment and usually names the date and place where the "closing" or actual transfer of the property will occur. Also known as a deposit receipt in western states, this contract binds you legally to buying the home exactly as it is described in the document. Therefore, before you sign anything or hand over a deposit, go over the contract carefully and make sure you understand and agree with its provisions.

Besides understanding the sales contract and other documents you will be asked to sign, it's also a good idea to know what kind of expenses will be involved in the sale of a home. In addition to "closing" costs—which cover such items as application fees, credit reports, property surveys, title search and examination, title insurance, and miscellaneous fees for drawing up the mortgage documents—there are also a number of payments ("home ownership expenses") that you will probably have to make.

Utility charges—depending upon the community, you may be assessed a connection or tie-in fee or advance payment by the local utility companies.

Real estate taxes—most home mortgages require that each month's payment include some money to be set aside in an escrow account for real estate taxes. When your taxes come due, the mortgage lender then pays them out of this account.

Hazard insurance—you will probably be asked to pay for insurance to protect against damages to the property caused by fire, windstorm or other hazards. This insurance is designed to protect the lender's investment in your unit and, therefore, differs from a homeowner's insurance policy that you would get for yourself. Often the money used to pay for hazard insurance comes from the same escrow account explained above.

To give you more information about settlement costs, Housing & Urban Development Dept. (HUD) has published a fact sheet (163 D) which you can get free from Consumer Information, Pueblo, CO. 81009.

Ann Landers

Teen-age bride regrets marriage

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this for all the teens who are planning on getting married this year.

At 16, I married my "dream man". At 18, when my high school friends were receiving their diplomas I was at home, folding diapers for two. Some of my girl friends said they envied me, but little did they know how much I envied THEM. I was too ashamed to admit that my dream man was spending more evenings away from home than with me.

A year later we were fed up with each other. I couldn't take his running around and he couldn't take my nagging.

All you teenagers who think marriage means "romance forever" are kidding yourselves. First, there's the money problem. When we were dating there was always enough for pizza, movies, picnics, whatever we wanted to do. After we married, the bills began to pile up. We didn't know where they came from.

You think a baby will help keep him home. Well, it keeps YOU home, but it pushes HIM out. He'd rather be drinking beer with his buddies. Crying babies make him "nervous."

I wish I had finished high school. I could express my feelings better. I feel half-educated and--Messed Up At 19

Dear 19: You expressed your feelings quite eloquently, and I thank you. Any high school dropout who wishes to get a diploma can do it if he (or she) is willing to work for it. Call your high school principal and ask about the alternaives--there are several. And good luck to you, dear.

Dear Ann: My husband and I owned a small farm and worked together to make it go. We made the old equipment do and lived a conservative, quiet life so we could give our children the best of everything.

Six years ago, my husband passed away suddenly. I was 45. Somehow I managed to pull myself together and carry on alone. Two years later I met a wonderful man who made me want to live live again. Ralph and I were married.

My 16-yer-old son was happy for me. He liked Ralph very much, but the 23-year-old son is another story. He is a college graduate, lives away from home, has a fine job and is debt-free. He has nice friends and a pleasant life, but he can't stand the sight of his stepfather. He did everything under the sun to keep me from marrying.

Now he says I must choose between Ralph and him. He refuses to come to see me unless I assure him that Ralph is out of the house. If there is a family party he will not attend unless I agree in advance to come without Ralph. Sometimes I think I'll go crazy trying to decide what to do. Ralph has been very patient, but how long can he put up with this insolence? I love my son and don't want to lose him. Will you please tell me what to do?--Torn

Dear Torn: Your son is already lost. Moveover, he is a selfish, punitive young man who could use some professional help.

Tell him you're sorry he feels so strongly about Ralph, but you will not ask your husband to leave the house, nor will you exclude him from family affairs. Let your son know the door will always be open, but since he insists that you make a choice, you must choose your husband.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious--lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers's booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-adressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Science gives home gardeners green thumbs

Gardening for home gardeners is easier now than ever before. Scientific research into plant growth mysteries and into cultural methods has resulted in numerous changes in plant production and cultural techniques. As a result, home gardeners can now use plants, tools and gardening methods unknown a generation ago. Plant varieties are much improved for production, uniformity and disease resistance. New forms and colors have been developed for both flowers and vegetables.

Bedding plant growers across the continent use modern cultural methods to produce millions of healthy, well-grown vegetable and flower plants. These plants are shipped to your garden supply store when the weather warms. The transplants are easy to plant in your garden, and they grow quickly, saving you time and effort in realizing your garden plans.

Fertilizers for vegetable gardens or for flower gardens are being produced in a new, light-weight granular form for ease in handling and uniformity in application. Study the results of soil tests which can be done for you by your State University Agronomy Department, and follow directions for use of any fertilizer recommended to fity the special soil requirements in your garden.

Another aid to gardening is the use of mulches. Mulching involves the use of some kind of ground cover between the plants or rows of plants. In the vegetable garden a black plastic cover can be spread over the ground between the rows to warm the soil, conserve moisture and prevent weed growth.

Dried grass clippings make a fine mulching material for vegetable or for flower gardens. Other organic mulches include compost, peanut shells and ground bark.

Gardening is now easier than ever for gardeners with limited space. In addition to window boxes and tubs, there is available a wide assortment of containers for growing plants on terraces and balconies, or in hanging containers.

Potting soil mixes are for sale at your garden supply store for use in window boxes and other containers. Some potting mixtures contain no soil and are called peat-lite mixes because they are composed of peat moss and vermiculite in fairly coarse grade. If the soil-less mixture contains no fertilizer (the label on the bar or carton will give this information), use a convenient liquid or soluble fertilizer offered for sale at your nursery or garden supply store.

Joy of Stitching

by ELSA WILLIAMS

TOUCH OF SPLENDOR

As you become more skilled in your embroidery, you'll want to create something beautiful to wear. An embroidered necklace or collar is a timeless accessory that adds a touch of splendor to any costume. Take a look at the blaze of color in the wide, flat necklaces worn by ancient Egyptians and Romans. Imagine the effect of such a barbaric blaze against a black silk knit turtleneck or a dusky velvet dress.

Begin by drawing an outline of the necklace, giving it a circular sweep, broad and deep in the front, tapering toward the shoulders. A collar should be deep and gently shaped. To be sure of the proportions, it might be a good idea to trace it from a sewing pattern.

This is the place to show off ... to use all the textured stitches you've learned ... to strike sparks with brilliant color. Use the dark iridescence of bugle beads for accents, incorporate polished pieces of agate, quartz, amethyst or turquoise into the design to ignite your embroidery colors. Small semi-precious stones can be bought quite inexpensively at museum craft shops.

You might like to take a good look at Renaissance period paintings in a museum or make a trip to the library to study the magnificent jewelled collars and necklaces worn by royalty during the Renaissance. These will inspire you to rush home and start creating your own "portrait pieces."

Dear Elsa,
How can I tell if my tapestry needle is the right size for the canvas I'm using? I always forget which number needle goes with which size of canvas. Is there a rule?
S.G.

Dear S.G.,
Here's an easy test. Put the needle (unthreaded) through the canvas. If it falls through the mesh easily without your having to push it through, it's probably the right size. To be absolutely certain, thread the needle with the yarn you plan to use and work a small patch of canvas. If you find you're tugging at the needle, better try another size. Also check the needle to be sure it's smooth and shiny. Tiny flecks of roughness or — worse — rust, also cause tugging. To refresh your memory, the most commonly used numbers are: No. 20 needle with No. 10 canvas; No. 22 needle for No. 13 or No. 14 canvas.

Sausage Sorcery

• With income taxes due this month, your budget may be feeling an extra pinch. Remember, wise shoppers determine the cost per serving before purchasing meat. Lean meat such as hamburger, stew meat or boneless roasts yield 3 to 4 servings per pound; most roasts and steaks with some bone provide 2 to 3 servings per pound; steaks and ribs with a lot of bone, fat and gristle yield only 1 to 2 servings; but one pound of skinless franks serves 4 to 5 persons and you can satisfy 7 people with sliced bologna, salami or summer sausage if its used in a casserole or in sandwiches.

• For great after school or late night snacks, try wrapping slices of luncheon meat around spears of carrots, celery, cheddar cheese or dill pickles. Lunchmeat wrap-arounds provide a between-meal protein punch.

• April showers may bring May flowers but they also bring grey chilly days. Fight the chills with a Polish Hot Pot. Pare 6 potatoes and cut into ½ inch slices. Arrange in the bottom of a greased 2 quart casserole. Cut ½ pound Polish sausage into 1 inch slices and place over potatoes. Top with 6 onions thickly sliced. Mix a 1 pound can of tomatoes, 1½ teaspoons paprika and 1 teaspoon salt and add to the casserole. Bake at 350° for 45 minutes. Stir in ½ cup sour cream and bake 15 minutes longer. Makes 6 servings.

• If you have lunch box toters at home, remember, "variety is the spice of life." Buy various types of bread and rolls and freeze them so you can have a different sandwich "look" each day of the week. Investigate the large selection at your supermarket's "cold cut" counter; each week buy two new types of sausage such as cotto salami, cervelat, pepperoni or pickle loaf.

Try club soda on stained appliances

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — Do you know how to remove nicotine stains from the outside of a refrigerator? —L.G.P.

DEAR L.G.P. — You do have a problem. Harsh abrasives must be avoided so as not to damage the finish. Have you tried a damp cloth sprinkled with household cleanser. If it does work apply kitchen wax and polish. Also you might try club soda, there is a chance it might do the job. How about this reader? — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — Those with limited living space should never underestimate the value of an adjustable ironing board. Mine is used every day and for many things. I put a plastic tablecloth on it to make an extra work table near the stove to use during the day. When my grandchildren come to visit, I put it down low and give them cookie cutters and play dough or coloring books and crayons. They use it as a work table that is close enough so we can visit as I cook. Sometimes I put a bright tablecloth on it and they have a picnic lunch. When I have guests my ironing board table, with a lace cloth on it, is used as a buffet. —HAZEL.

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve is to purchase items having a coupon giving me a reduced price, and then find the cashier did not deduct that amount from my bill. Many times I would not have purchased the item if there had been no coupon. Better start checking. —MARTY.

DEAR POLLY — Now that more people are driving smaller, lighter cars, they are finding them hard to handle on icy and snowy roads since the rear end of such a car needs more weight. We have a great idea for this. Cut an old inner-tube to make one long tube and tie one end. Fill tube with sand just as one would fill a sausage casing, and then tie off the other end. Keep in the car trunk. The tube will not only provide needed weight for the rear end, but when having trouble on ice untie one end, remove a few scoops of sand and spread on the ice to provide needed traction.

Also, if one is in a serious accident and the car rolls so the sand stuffed tube hits you, it will cause less harm than a concrete block such as some use. This is a fact to be considered if the trunk is not separated from the passenger compartment, as is the case in some types of small cars. —DENISE.

Fetal Monitoring Helps Cut Childbirth Problems

NEW HYDE PARK, N. Y. (AP) — "Do you want to hear my baby's heart beating?" asked the young father-to-be standing alongside his wife's bed in the obstetrics section of Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center.

He switched on a bedside recording instrument and a "beeping" sound echoed the rhythmic beating of their unborn baby's heart.

From the moment she was admitted to the medical center's labor room, the young wife and unborn baby were being guarded by an advanced technique of fetal monitoring. Detection devices placed on her abdomen were connected to a moving graph. The indicator traced sharp peaks to show each of the mother's contractions as the baby moved through the birth canal. Jagged, wavering lines recorded the beating heart of the fetus.

In most cases, childbirth goes smoothly. But if the fetal heartbeat shows a pattern of faltering or irregularity, the staff of the labor room instantly swing into action.

The obstetrician draws a tiny drop of blood from the unborn baby's scalp. Laboratory technicians test the blood's acidity level. Increasing acidity means that the fetus is not getting enough oxygen — that it is figuratively gasping. If this happens, delivery by cesarean section can be under way in less than five minutes.

Speed is essential since many types of congenital brain damage, and neurological problems such as cerebral palsy, are now known to be due to oxygen deprivation in the fetus.

Dr. Joseph J. Rovinsky, chairman of the hospital's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, points out that "continuous monitoring means that the mother and baby are being electronically safeguarded all the time. No one can predict the precise moment a normal pregnancy and labor might turn into a disaster. The combined technique of scalp testing and fetal monitoring is the highest level of safety available currently."

The program now in use at the hospital can detect most cases of an unborn child in serious difficulty. This is seen as a major step towards cutting down on stillbirths and assuring newborns of the maximum chance for normal, healthy lives.

Marmalade Goes Into Dessert

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

When there's a jar of orange marmalade on hand you can make one of the most delightful desserts — Marmalade Meringue. It originated many years ago and was cooked in a double-boiler and served hot. Now we find it may be made another way — in the oven — and this way it benefits from being served chilled. If you welcome delicate desserts to prepare ahead, the chances are you'll appreciate this version.

MARMALADE MERINGUE

4 egg whites
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
½ cup orange marmalade
1 teaspoon vanilla
Custard Sauce, see below
6 membrane-free fresh orange slices

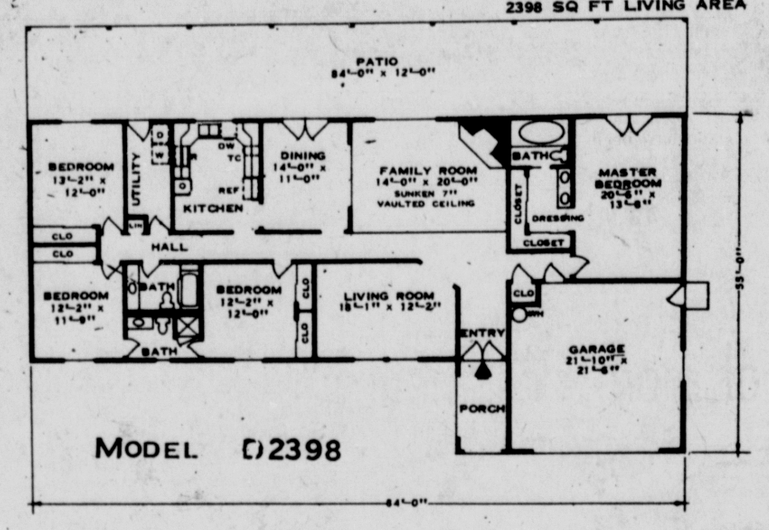
Beat egg whites and salt until they form tilted peaks; gradually beat in the sugar until they form stiff peaks. Fold in the marmalade and the vanilla. Turn into six 6-ounce custard cups placed in a 13 by 9 by 2 inch baking pan. Add enough boiling water to the pan to come up about ¾-inch. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until golden — about 15 minutes. Remove cups to a wire rack and let stand until cool — the meringues will sink. Chill. With a small metal spatula loosen edges and unmold. Serve with Custard Sauce and garnish with the orange. Makes 6 servings.

Custard Sauce: In the top of a double-boiler over direct heat, scald 2 cups milk. Beat together 4 egg yolks, ¼ cup sugar and ⅛ teaspoon salt just until combined; gradually but vigorously whisk in about half the milk. Return to double-boiler top. Stirring constantly, cook over hot water until slightly thickened and mixture forms a straight line across a silver spoon. At once place over very cold water to stop the cooking and stir in 1 teaspoon vanilla. Chill. Makes about 2 cups.

MARMALADE MERINGUE—It's delicate, delicious and delightful as well as kind to the budget.

Long, Low and Lovely

2398 SQ FT LIVING AREA



Long, low and lovely to look at with eye-pleasing exterior lines, this four bedroom, three bath design offers a graciously simple floor plan spiced with imaginative, yet practical, touches.

Take a look, for example, at the attractive entrance porch treatment and the paneling detail on the double front doors and the garage doors, as well.

Then step inside where the practical entry offers an immediate view of a fabulous back-of-the-house family room. Sunken a full seven inches, and further dramatized by a vaulted ceiling, this large, made-to-be-lived-in room, with its distinctive corner fireplace, opens onto the huge, length-of-the-house rear patio.

Up a wide step, the adjacent dining room shares in the sense of drama and has its own patio entrance, too.

The kitchen of this plan has a U-shaped work area, chock full of cupboards, and there's a large utility-laundry room right beside it, handy also as a rear service entryway.

At this end of the house are three full-sized bedrooms, two of which share a convenient semi-private bath which backs up—for plumbing efficiency—to the main bath, just off the bedroom hallway.

At the opposite end of the house, privately separate for maximum tranquility, is the large, luxurious master bedroom. This delightful retreat has a hugh bath, dressing and closet area and its own double doors to that long, lovely patio. And it is just a handy step away from the inside garage entrance, too.

Study this plan carefully, noting the gracious living features it provides throughout all of its nearly 2,400 square foot living area. If you demand practicality, but have a yen for luxury, too, this model could be just what you are looking for.

First job interview vital for seeker

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — With more than 1,200,000 college graduates this spring expected to enter a U.S. job market already experiencing a high unemployment rate, the make-or-break step for many job seekers will be the initial interview, says the manager of corporate employment for one of the nation's top 50 companies.

"There are many things that may determine whether or not a job candidate is successful. But if an applicant does well in the initial interview, it greatly improves the chance that he or she will be hired," said Charles Jennings, of R. J. Reynolds Industries here.

Jennings and two members of his staff, Joe Carideo, personnel supervisor, and Denis Simon, personnel representative, handle 1,200 to 1,500 job interviews each year. They offered the following suggestions on how to get an interview and how to handle it once you make it through the door:

—First contact with a company is often a resume. Prepare it as though it were a written interview on your qualifications and experience. Find out about the company and the requirements of the job you are applying for, then tailor the resume to emphasize your qualifications.

—Do not write to an officer of the company expecting to make an impression. Such letters are almost always sent to the personnel department as a matter of routine.

—Before going to an interview, do a thorough check on the company. Find out about its products and services, and particular problems or opportunities it may have in your field. When a person takes time to prepare for an interview, it's a good indication he or she will show the same initiative on the job.

—Plan how you are going to answer certain questions. Most interviewers ask a number of routine questions about your general background and job experience. Use your knowledge of the company to plan honest answers that will show how your experience relates to the company's needs.

—Above all, be yourself. Present your personality and skills honestly, both in the interview and on paper. Almost all companies check references and other information on applications thoroughly, and any discrepancies can hurt your chances.

—Although not one of the most critical factors, appearance is important. Most employers will look for a neat appearance consistent with a business environment.

—Take work samples if you feel they will demonstrate skills.

—If possible, indicate how your educational preparation and past jobs have furthered your career goals. Working toward goals in a logical manner rather than changing jobs every year or two strictly for financial gain makes an impression.

State agronomy specialist

PORTAGEVILLE —Stands of cotton are being observed in southern part of the Bootheel, and soybean planting is getting off to an earlier start than usual and should be in full swing in a few days.

Last year, 1,460,000 acres were harvested in the Bootheel counties, with an average yield of around 27 bushels per acre.

Although the growers are hoping to do as well or better this year than in 1975, they will be trying to hold down losses from weeds and diseases.

Varieties have been selected to fit soil types and cut down on cyst nematode damage.

Determining the right planting rate will also aid in harvesting more beans per acre.

The Bootheel farmer has over 30 varieties to choose from when selecting a soybean to plant. One characteristic of soybean varieties is the difference in seed size. Some varieties may have very large seed while others have extremely small seed. The old rule of thumb "bushel per acre" seeding rate for soybeans may not work for you.

As a general rule, most growers tend to plant soybeans too thick. This practice can cost money in two ways: (1) planting more seed per acre than is actually needed means more money being spent for seed beans; and (2) soybeans planted too thick usually have a thin, spindly stalk and tend to lodge much more than those planted at lower rates.

Higher harvesting losses may occur in soybean fields that are badly lodged. So you can see, a farmer may lose money both at planting and harvest as a result of higher seeding rates than are necessary.

Using seed per foot of row to determine planting rate is the best method for getting the most desirable plant population per acre.

For an example, if a grower plants both York (large seeded variety) and Pickett 71 (small seeded variety), if he sets his planter for 45 pounds per acre for both York and Pickett 71 there will be quite a difference in actual seeding rates per foot of row. If he plants on 38-inch rows, York will be planted at the rate of eight seeds per foot of row while Pickett 71, with same setting, will plant 11 seeds per foot of row.

Many farmers have said that the York variety has less tendency to lodge than Pickett 71. Some of this difference can probably be attributed to the difference in seed size of the two varieties which gives two different plant populations at the same planter setting.

As a high seeding rate may be costly both at planting and harvest, the following steps are recommended: (1) plant seeds per foot of row-not pounds per acre; (2) check planter setting each time varieties are changed and adjust if necessary; (3) when planting seeds per foot of row, it is important to use good quality, high germinating seed; (4) consider soil type, soil crusting tendencies and possibly weed problems in determining what population to plant.

At the Delta Center, the normal planting rate is eight seeds per row-foot for 30-inch rows and 10 seeds per row-foot for 38-inch rows. However, each farming operation should be considered individually in determining optimum planting rates.

This chart should be helpful with seed of 90 per cent germination and above.

Lower soybean prices this year causes need for fertilizer, lime

BLOOMFIELD— The application of lime and fertilizer according to soil needs determined by a soil test will be extremely important this season, according to Tom Brown, area agronomy specialist for the Stoddard County University of Missouri Extension Center. The current price outlook for soybeans is not too favorable; therefore, it will behoove farmers to strive for the highest yield that it is practical to produce.

Fertilizer is important for soybeans as well as other crops A 50-bushel yield of beans removes 40 pounds of phosphate and 70 pounds of potash compared to 50 pounds of phosphate and 35 pounds of potash removed from the soil by a 150-bushel yield of corn.

As this indicates, lots of plant food is removed from the soil by this crop, and bean yields as well as yields of other crops are low on many Stoddard County fields because beans have been produced so long with the application of little or no fertilizer.

Beans will respond very well to direct application of fertilizer on many fields in this area. For example, soybean yields were increased an average of six bushels per acre from the application of 60 pounds of potash per acre on 19 Southeast Missouri fields testing 150 pounds of potash or lower.

Likewise, bean yields were increased an average of three bushels per acre from the application of 60 pounds of phosphate per acre on eight fields in this area testing 100 pounds of phosphate or lower. Many fields in Stoddard County test below these levels of phosphate and potash.

Since the soybean is a legume, lime is necessary to the production of profitable yields of this crop. Lime not only adds plant nutrients to the soil which are important to soybean production, but it corrects the soil acidity which maximizes the effectiveness of phosphate, potash and other plant food elements necessary to the successful production of soybeans.

The application of lime and fertilizer are necessary if high-yield production of soybeans is to be accomplished. A soil test to guide their application is essential if maximum returns from money invested in fertilizer and lime are to be realized.

At least two to three weeks will be required for the farmer to receive his fertilizer and lime recommendations after he brings his soil samples to the University of Missouri Extension Center for testing. Consequently, farmers who do not have a recent soil test from all soybean fields should submit their samples for testing as soon as possible.

Swine pavilion to be improved

SEDALIA — About $80,000 in structural improvements were started this month on the swine pavilion at the Missouri State Fair. Work is tentatively scheduled for completion May 17.

Nearly two acres of new roofing are being placed on the 54-year-old structure. Other improvements recently completed or now under way include a redesigned show arena, a new office, repaired pens, new paint and removal of the stairs and balcony on the northeast corner of the building.

The renovated structure will host the National Duroc Congress July21-23 and will be used during the 1976 Missouri State Fair, scheduled Aug. 20-29

Govenor proclaims May as beef month

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has proclaimed May as Beef Month in Missouri, and efforts are being made to increase public awareness of the nutritional value of beef and the importance of the beef industry to Missouri's economy.

"Missouri beef producers have long been leaders in improving the quality of beef products available to all consumers," Bond said in his proclamation. Missouri ranks second in the nation in numbers of cows and calves. The beef industry accounts for 25 per cent of Missouri's total cash receipts from farming.

Present for the proclamation signing in the governor's office were James B. Boillot, director, Missouri Department of Agriculture; Junior Simpson of Salem, president, Missouri Cattlemen's Association; Mrs. Junior Simpson of Salem, president, Missouri CowBelles; Bill Sidwell of Queen City, chairman, Missouri Beef Industries Council; W. D. Richards of Keytesville, president, Missouri Livestock Feeders Association; and Jack Palmer of Fulton, commodity director, Missouri Farm Bureau.

After the proclamation signing, Mrs. Simpson presented Gov. Bond 10 choice steaks.

Soil moisture is improved by rains

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The soil moisture content of Missouri's farm fields improved last week but rain kept the state's farmers out of their fields much of the time.

The Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Monday that 75 per cent of the state's fields had adequate moisture at the end of the week and 8 per cent had surplus moisture—a vast improvement over the report a couple weeks earlier that much of the state had inadequate soil moisture.

Plowing was reported 93 per cent complete across the state, about two weeks ahead of normal for the period. The reporting service also said corn planting was 43 per cent complete, an increase of 8 per cent over the previous week and two weeks ahead of normal.

Cotton planting was reported 26 per cent complete, eight days ahead of normal, and about 7 per cent of the grain sorghum crop was planted by the end of last week. The reporting service said soybean planting started last week, and about 3 per cent of the crop was planted.

Problems were reported with alfalfa weevils in some local areas of northwest, north-central, southwest and south-central Missouri.

NEW FOOD

CLEMSON, S. C. (AP) — Dr. Jack Mitchell Jr., a bio-chemist at Clemson University, has come up with a brand new peanut product which he believes could become a worldwide food staple.

Peanuts are ground into white mush, made into a milky mixture by adding water, cooked, dried into thin sheets and crumbled or ground into flakes or powder.

Mitchell says the product is highly nutritious, cholesterol free, has a long storage life and a remarkable ability to take on the flavor of other food.

Science gives home gardeners green thumbs

Gardening for home gardeners is easier now than ever before. Scientific research into plant growth mysteries and into cultural methods has resulted in numerous changes in plant production and cultural techniques. As a result, home gardeners can now use plants, tools and gardening methods unknown a generation ago. Plant varieties are much improved for production, uniformity and disease resistance. New forms and colors have been developed for both flowers and vegetables.

Bedding plant growers across the continent use modern cultural methods to produce millions of healthy, well-grown vegetable and flower plants. These plants are shipped to your garden supply store when the weather warms. The transplants are easy to plant in your garden, and they grow quickly, saving you time and effort in realizing your garden plans.

Fertilizers for vegetable gardens or for flower gardens are being produced in a new, light-weight granular form for ease in handling and uniformity in application. Study the results of soil tests which can be done for you by your State University Agronomy Department, and follow directions for use of any fertilizer recommended to fity the special soil requirements in your garden.

Another aid to gardening is the use of mulches. Mulching involves the use of some kind of ground cover between the plants or rows of plants. In the vegetable garden a black plastic cover can be spread over the ground between the rows to warm the soil, conserve moisture and prevent weed growth.

Dried grass clippings make a fine mulching material for vegetable or for flower gardens. Other organic mulches include compost, peanut shells and ground bark.

Gardening is now easier than ever for gardeners with limited space. In addition to window boxes and tubs, there is available a wide assortment of containers for growing plants on terraces and balconies, or in hanging containers.

Potting soil mixes are for sale at your garden supply store for use in window boxes and other containers. Some potting mixtures contain no soil and are called peat-lite mixes because they are composed of peat moss and vermiculite in fairly coarse grade. If the soil-less mixture contains no fertilizer (the label on the bar or carton will give this information), use a convenient liquid or soluble fertilizer offered for sale at your nursery or garden supply store.

Joy of Stitching

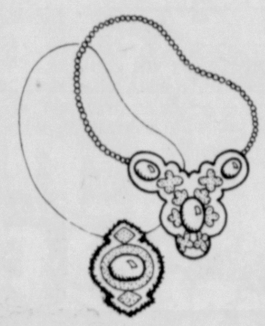
TOUCH OF SPLENDOR

As you become more skilled in your embroidery, you'll want to create something beautiful to wear. An embroidered necklace or collar is a timeless accessory that adds a touch of splendor to any costume. Take a look at the blaze of color in the wide, flat necklaces worn by ancient Egyptians and Romans. Imagine the effect of such a barbaric blaze against a black silk knit turtleneck or a dusky velvet dress.

Begin by drawing an outline of the necklace, giving it a circular sweep, broad and deep in the front, tapering toward the shoulders. A collar should be deep and gently shaped. To be sure of the proportions, it might be a good idea to trace it from a sewing pattern.



This is the place to show off ... to use all the textured stitches you've learned ... to strike sparks with brilliant color. Use the dark iridescence of bugle beads for accents, incorporate polished pieces of agate, quartz, amethyst or turquoise into the design to ignite your embroidery colors. Small semi-precious stones can be bought quite inexpensively at museum craft shops.

The same kind of embroidery can be used on a pair of cuffs for a classic dark dress. You'll find yourself wearing such cuffs as you would jewels, year after year. Do this on fine canvas and experiment by blending metallic, embroidery and linen threads with crewel yarns.

You might like to take a good look at Renaissance period paintings in a museum or make a trip to the library to study the magnificent jewelled collars and necklaces worn by royalty during the Renaissance. These will inspire you to rush home and start creating your own "portrait pieces."

Dear Elsa,

How can I tell if my tapestry needle is the right size for the canvas I'm using? I always forget which number needle goes with which size of canvas. Is there a rule?

S.G.

Dear S.G.,

Here's an easy test. Put the needle (unthreaded) through the canvas. If it falls through the mesh easily without your having to push it through, it's probably the right size. To be absolutely certain, thread the needle with the yarn you plan to use and work a small patch of canvas. If you find you're tugging at the needle, better try another size. Also check the needle to be sure it's smooth and shiny. Tiny flecks of roughness or — worse — rust, also cause tugging. To refresh your memory, the most commonly used numbers are: No. 20 needle with No. 10 canvas; No. 22 needle for No. 13 or No. 14 canvas.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — Do you know how to remove nicotine stains from the outside of a refrigerator? —L.G.P.

DEAR L.G.P. — You do have a problem. Harsh abrasives must be avoided so as not to damage the finish. Have you tried a damp cloth sprinkled with household cleanser. If it does work apply kitchen wax and polish. Also you might try club soda, there is a chance it might do the job. How about this reader? — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — Those with limited living space should never underestimate the value of an adjustable ironing board. Mine is used every day and for many things. I put a plastic tablecloth on it to make an extra work table near the stove to use during the day. When my grandchildren come to visit, I put it down low and give them cookie cutters and play dough or coloring books and crayons. They use it as a work table that is close enough so we can visit as I cook. Sometimes I put a bright tablecloth on it and they have a picnic lunch. When I have guests my ironing board table, with a lace cloth on it, is used as a buffet. —HAZEL.

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve is to purchase items having a coupon giving me a reduced price, and then find the cashier did not deduct that amount from my bill. Many times I would not have purchased the item if there had been no coupon. Better start checking. —MARTY.

DEAR POLLY — Now that more people are driving smaller, lighter cars, they are finding them hard to handle on icy and snowy roads since the rear end of such a car needs more weight. We have a great idea for this. Cut an old inner-tube to make one long tube and tie one end. Fill tube with sand just as one would fill a sausage casing, and then tie off the other end. Keep in the car trunk. The tube will not only provide needed weight for the rear end, but when having trouble on ice untie one end, remove a few scoops of sand and spread on the ice to provide needed traction.

Also, if one is in a serious accident and the car rolls so the sand stuffed tube hits you, it will cause less harm than a concrete block such as some use. This is a fact to be considered if the trunk is not separated from the passenger compartment, as is the case in some types of small cars. —DENISE.

SAUSAGE SORCERY

• With income taxes due this month, your budget may be feeling an extra pinch. Remember, wise shoppers determine the cost per serving before purchasing meat. Lean meat such as hamburger, stew meat or boneless roasts yield 3 to 4 servings per pound; most roasts and steaks with some bone provide 2 to 3 servings per pound; steaks and ribs with a lot of bone, fat and gristle yield only 1 to 2 servings; but one pound of skinless franks serves 4 to 5 persons and you can satisfy 7 people with sliced bologna, salami or summer sausage if its used in a casserole or in sandwiches.

• For great after school or late night snacks, try wrapping slices of luncheon meat around spears of carrots, celery, cheddar cheese or dill pickles. Lunchmeat wrap-arounds provide a between-meal protein punch.

• April showers may bring May flowers but they also bring grey chilly days. Fight the chills with a Polish Hot Pot. Pare 6 potatoes and cut into ½ inch slices. Arrange in the bottom of a greased 2 quart casserole. Cut ½ pound Polish sausage into 1 inch slices and place over potatoes. Top with 6 onions thickly sliced. Mix a 1 pound can of tomatoes, 1½ teaspoons paprika and 1 teaspoon salt and add to the casserole. Bake at 350° for 45 minutes. Stir in ½ cup sour cream and bake 15 minutes longer. Makes 6 servings.

• If you have lunch box toters at home, remember, "variety is the spice of life." Buy various types of bread and rolls and freeze them so you can have a different sandwich "look" each day of the week. Investigate the large selection at your supermarket's "cold cut" counter; each week buy two new types of sausage such as cotto salami, cervelat, pepperoni or pickle loaf.

PORTAGEVILLE —Stands of cotton are being observed in southern part of the Bootheel, and soybean planting is getting off to an earlier start than usual and should be in full swing in a few days.

Last year, 1,460,000 acres were harvested in the Bootheel counties, with an average yield of around 27 bushels per acre.

Although the growers are hoping to do as well or better this year than in 1975, they will be trying to hold down losses from weeds and diseases.

Varieties have been selected to fit soil types and cut down on cyst nematode damage.

Determining the right planting rate will also aid in harvesting more beans per acre.

The Bootheel farmer has over 30 varieties to choose from when selecting a soybean to plant. One characteristic of soybean varieties is the difference in seed size. Some varieties may have very large seed while others have extremely small seed. The old rule of thumb "bushel per acre" seeding rate for soybeans may not work for you.

As a general rule, most growers tend to plant soybeans too thick. This practice can cost money in two ways: (1) planting more seed per acre than is actually needed means more money being spent for seed beans; and (2) soybeans planted too thick usually have a thin, spindly stalk and tend to lodge much more than those planted at lower rates.

Higher harvesting losses may occur in soybean fields that are badly lodged. So you can see, a farmer may lose money both at planting and harvest as a result of higher seeding rates than are necessary.

Using seed per foot of row to determine planting rate is the best method for getting the most desirable plant population per acre.

For an example, if a grower plants both York (large seeded variety) and Pickett 71 (small seeded variety), if he sets his planter for 45 pounds per acre for both York and Pickett 71 there will be quite a difference in actual seeding rates per foot of row. If he plants on 38-inch rows, York will be planted at the rate of eight seeds per foot of row while Pickett 71, with same setting, will plant 11 seeds per foot of row.

Many farmers have said that the York variety has less tendency to lodge than Pickett 71. Some of this difference can probably be attributed to the difference in seed size of the two varieties which gives two different plant populations at the same planter setting.

As a high seeding rate may be costly both at planting and harvest, the following steps are recommended: (1) plant seeds per foot of row-not pounds per acre; (2) check planter setting each time varieties are changed and adjust if necessary; (3) when planting seeds per foot of row, it is important to use good quality, high germinating seed; (4) consider soil type, soil crusting tendencies and possibly weed problems in determining what population to plant.

At the Delta Center, the normal planting rate is eight seeds per row-foot for 30-inch rows and 10 seeds per row-foot for 38-inch rows. However, each farming operation should be considered individually in determining optimum planting rates.

This chart should be helpful with seed of 90 per cent germination and above.

Lower soybean prices this year causes need for fertilizer, lime

BLOOMFIELD— The application of lime and fertilizer according to soil needs determined by a soil test will be extremely important this season, according to Tom Brown, area agronomy specialist for the Stoddard County University of Missouri Extension Center. The current price outlook for soybeans is not too favorable; therefore, it will behoove farmers to strive for the highest yield that it is practical to produce.

Fertilizer is important for soybeans as well as other crops. A 50-bushel yield of beans removes 40 pounds of phosphate and 70 pounds of potash compared to 50 pounds of phosphate and 35 pounds of potash removed from the soil by a 150-bushel yield of corn.

As this indicates, lots of plant food is removed from the soil by this crop, and bean yields as well as yields of other crops are low on many Stoddard County fields because beans have been produced so long with the application of little or no fertilizer.

Beans will respond very well to direct application of fertilizer on many fields in this area. For example, soybean yields were increased an average of six bushels per acre from the application of 60 pounds of potash per acre on 19 Southeast Missouri fields testing 150 pounds of potash or lower.

Likewise, bean yields were increased an average of three bushels per acre from the application of 60 pounds of phosphate per acre on eight fields in this area testing 100 pounds of phosphate or lower. Many fields in Stoddard County test below these levels of phosphate and potash.

Since the soybean is a legume, lime is necessary to the production of profitable yields of this crop. Lime not only adds plant nutrients to the soil which are important to soybean production, but it corrects the soil acidity which maximizes the effectiveness of phosphate, potash and other plant food elements necessary to the successful production of soybeans.

The application of lime and fertilizer are necessary if high-yield production of soybeans is to be accomplished. A soil test to guide their application is essential if maximum returns from money invested in fertilizer and lime are to be realized.

At least two to three weeks will be required for the farmer to receive his fertilizer and lime recommendations after he brings his soil samples to the University of Missouri Extension Center for testing. Consequently, farmers who do not have a recent soil test from all soybean fields should submit their samples for testing as soon as possible.

Swine pavilion to be improved

SEDALIA — About $80,000 in structural improvements were started this month on the swine pavilion at the Missouri State Fair. Work is tentatively scheduled for completion May 17.

Nearly two acres of new roofing are being placed on the 54-year-old structure. Other improvements recently completed or now under way include a redesigned show arena, a new office, repaired pens, new paint and removal of the stairs and balcony on the northeast corner of the building.

The renovated structure will host the National Duroc Congress July21-23 and will be used during the 1976 Missouri State Fair, scheduled Aug. 20-29.

Govenor proclaims May as beef month

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has proclaimed May as Beef Month in Missouri, and efforts are being made to increase public awareness of the nutritional value of beef and the importance of the beef industry to Missouri's economy.

"Missouri beef producers have long been leaders in improving the quality of beef products available to all consumers," Bond said in his proclamation. Missouri ranks second in the nation in numbers of cows and calves. The beef industry accounts for 25 per cent of Missouri's total cash receipts from farming.

Present for the proclamation signing in the governor's office were James B. Boillot, director, Missouri Department of Agriculture; Junior Simpson of Salem, president, Missouri Cattlemen's Association; Mrs. Junior Simpson of Salem, president, Missouri CowBelles; Bill Sidwell of Queen City, chairman, Missouri Beef Industries Council; W. D. Richards of Keytesville, president, Missouri Livestock Feeders Association; and Jack Palmer of Fulton, commodity director, Missouri Farm Bureau.

After the proclamation signing, Mrs. Simpson presented Gov. Bond 10 choice steaks.

Soil moisture is improved by rains

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The soil moisture content of Missouri's farm fields improved last week but rain kept the state's farmers out of their fields much of the time.

The Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Monday that 75 per cent of the state's fields had adequate moisture at the end of the week and 8 per cent had surplus moisture—a vast improvement over the report a couple weeks earlier that much of the state had inadequate soil moisture.

Plowing was reported 93 per cent complete across the state, about two weeks ahead of normal for the period. The reporting service also said corn planting was 43 per cent complete, an increase of 8 per cent over the previous week and two weeks ahead of normal.

Cotton planting was reported 26 per cent complete, eight days ahead of normal, and about 7 per cent of the grain sorghum crop was planted by the end of last week. The reporting service said soybean planting started last week, and about 3 per cent of the crop was planted.

Problems were reported with alfalfa weevils in some local areas of northwest, north-central, southwest and south-central Missouri.

NEW FOOD

CLEMSON, S. C. (AP) — Dr. Jack Mitchell Jr., a bio-chemist at Clemson University, has come up with a brand new peanut product which he believes could become a worldwide food staple.

Peanuts are ground into white mush, made into a milky mixture by adding water, cooked, dried into thin sheets and crumbled or ground into flakes or powder.

Mitchell says the product is highly nutritious, cholesterol free, has a long storage life and a remarkable ability to take on the flavor of other food.

Super-Simple Blazer

Surefit Patterns, the new "patterns by computer" company, announces the 1976 up-to-the-minute design line for spring and summer. This complete collection of dresses, skirts, jackets, pants and bluses for day and evening has been attractively presented in a colorfully photographed and illustrated catalogue. Other women who sew may be interested in ordering this new booklet of made-to-measure designs directly from the company.

Featured in this new catalogue is a easy-to-sew blazer which all the pattern companies have indicated to be one of their most popular items in the current sewing season. This pattern-by-computer concept is unique in home sewing. After submitting certain measurements (how to take them is explained in the catalogue), home sewers receive patterns drawn and scaled to their own body measurements.

The pattern pieces themselves are drawn on clear see-through plastic, which is a plus for matching fabric prints and plaids. Because these patterns are so durable, they can be used over and over.

Many women who sew find that the most troublesome aspect is not the sewing itself, but the pattern adjustments and the fitting. With this made-to-measure pattern, there is no longer any concern about this. You can simply pin the pattern parts to the fabric, then cut it, sew it and wear it.

To order this new catalogue of designs write: Surefit Patterns, 65 Oak St. Norwood, N.J. 07648, Department PR-10, enclosing $1. The $1 is applied to any order mailed in by new customers.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, May 2, the 123rd day of 1976. There are 243 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1945, the Soviets announced the fall of Berlin in World War II.

On this date:

In 1670, the Hudson's Bay Company was chartered by England.

In 1863, Confederate Gen. Thomas (Stonewall) Jackson was mistaken for a Union scout and shot and fatally wounded by his own soldiers during the Civil War Battle of Chancellorsville, Va.

In 1890, the Oklahoma Territory was organized.

In 1933, Adolf Hitler abolished labor unions in Germany.

In 1960, Caryl Chessman was executed in San Quentin Prison in California after eight stays of execution.

In 1966, there was rioting in Israel during a visit by former West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

Ten years ago: U.S. Navy planes destroyed a missile site in North Vietnam.

Five years ago: Police in Washington, D.C., scattered anti-Vietnam War demonstrators who had camped in the center of the city.

One year ago: President Ford authorized the admission of 30,000 more South Vietnamese refugees into the United States, bringing to 123,000 the number that would be allowed to settle in the U.S.

Bicentennial footnote: Two-hundred years ago today, the North Carolina Provincial Congress, meeting in Halifax, ordered 1,500 militia to Wilmington, N.C., to protect the town from British forces arriving from England.

Afraid You're Going Deaf?
Cape Girardeau, Mo.-- A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.
Send for this non-operating model, put in on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this non-working model will show you how tiny hearing help can be, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.
These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Beltone Hearing Aid Center

Afraid You're Going Deaf?

Cape Girardeau, Mo.– A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Send for this non-operating model, put in on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this non-working model will show you how tiny hearing help can be, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Beltone Hearing Aid Center

A Throne of Stardom Is Predicted

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures

The British rock quartet Queen is touring around America and for those who haven't heard of it there are predictions it's going to be one of the big ones. Those who have heard of it, and are fans, are those who push its recordings straight up the best-selling charts the minute they're released and who know all about its black and white "trademark" and its theatrical stage show.

Is it weird? Not really, says lead singer Freddie Mercury. "If we were weird on stage, I don't know what you'd say the Tubes would be. It is not a show full of bombs going off. It is music that's the key factor. We're aware that people have come to listen to our music. We couple it with a bit of flashiness and the show business accoutrements that go with it. But the music is not just one big noise. We can be very sophisticated; in fact, we are."

Queen arrives for a tour in America, however, with 25 to 30 in its road crew. One person stands near each performer on stage, just to work quickly if something goes wrong with that performer's musical instrument. Others work lights and amplification systems.

Mercury, 29, is interviewed in his hotel suite on a cold New York day, barefoot, wearing white denim shorts, a black and white caftan top, silver snake bracelet around one wrist and black nail polish on one hand, no face makeup.

The shorts, like many things in the group's persona, just happened. "We keep all the good bits and if certain things don't work we forget them." On a previous tour, on a sunny, warm day in Los Angeles, somebody suggested that Mercury sing the encores in shorts and he did. Now he does it, even in wintertime.

The best-known nonmusical trademark of the group is its black and white garb. "In the early days, we just wore black. It was very bold and theatrical. Then we introduced white, for variety, and it just grew and grew."

The group's "coat of arms," which Mercury, who once studied at Ealing School of Art, drew, however, is beautifully colored — pink, blue, gold, white and green. A blue Q, edged in gold, has pink and blue rays radiating outward. Atop the Q is a crab for guitarist Brian May, who is a Cancer. On either side are lions for dummer Roger Meddows-Taylor and bass guitarist John Deacon, who are Leos. Also on each side are Mercury's Gemini symbols and atop it all is a Phoenix rising from flames.

The latest album, on Elektra, "A Night At the Opera," is No. 16 on the Feb. 14 best-selling chart and the single from it, "Bohemian Rhapsody," is No. 32 and climbing, on the chart of the same date.

"It is an album of very strong songs," Mercury says. "Each one can stand on its own. This is our strongest album in that way. It was hard to title."

The group is an expensive one to move around the world,

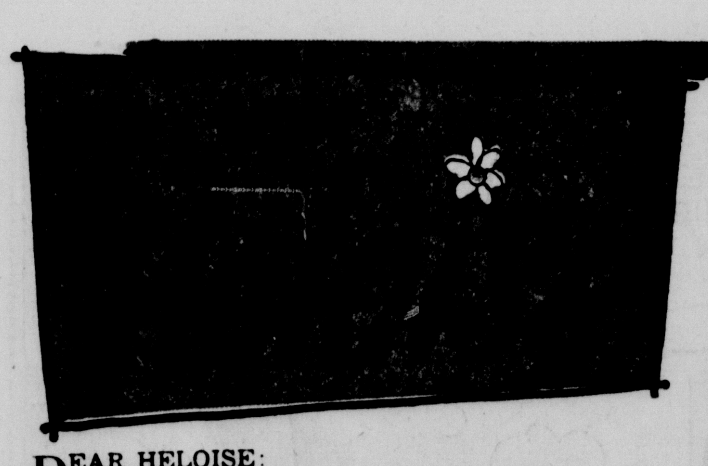
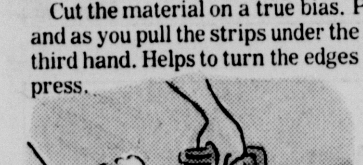
PONYTAIL ◇◇ BY LEE HOLLEY



DEAR HELOISE:

Lately I had to make several yards of bias tape as I couldn't match the material I was sewing. A friend saw the way I was making it and thought I should send you my instructions. I've made bias tape this way for years, but as it was new to her, perhaps it will be to others also.

Cut the material on a true bias. Place a pin in your ironing board and as you pull the strips under the pin, PRESS. The pin serves as a third hand. Helps to turn the edges under and holds them while you press.



If the bias strip is too wide for a pin, use a needle; or wider still, use a hat pin.

Hope your readers will find this helpful.

Well, gal, let me tell you, I sure did! You're a real wizard to have thought of this.

It's great, and saved me hours of frustration by not having to do that tedious job my old way.

Thanks a million times over! I just love you for writing to us about this! It's fantastic just like you.

SAVE THOSE PEELS!

DEAR HELOISE:

One of my pet savings is on orange marmalade.

When anyone peels an orange, we save the peels, for they are the basis of marmalade.

Freeze the peels until enough accumulate to warrant the time spent cooking the marmalade.

Delicious!

Mrs. H.H.

TOOTHBRUSH TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

This is a very practical hint for college students or anyone who shares dormitory lavatory facilities with limited space.

We discovered our facilities left little room to store one's toothbrush when not being utilized, and still have it clean and handy. To solve the problem, we used a strip of one-inch adhesive tape, marking a space for a loop to fit a toothbrush every inch. We then backed this space with another piece of tape, putting the sticky sides together.

Then all we had to do was fasten it to the wall with thumbtacks, loops free. The loops were perfect for our toothbrushes.

We found it to be very effective in a crazy "lav" with eight girls!

B.,G.,&N.

THE LUNCH BAGGER!

DEAR HELOISE:

I like to take my lunch to school as it's more economical and, to me, tastes better.

Every week when my mother makes her meal plans, I make my lunch plans. When shopping day comes, my mother puts the discount coupons, if any, in my basket and I shop for my lunches.

In this way, I learn to spot quality foods at "quality" prices, and I learn responsibility.

When I come home, I make my lunches for the week and on the bottom of each bag I write what is in it, and I put a little extra change in each bag so I will always have some. Then I freeze them.

I hope you find this hint helpful. Sure does save time and "7 a.m. temper tantrums" as they are called at our house.

Miss F.M. Cook

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

A guest just told me that when her family assembles around the dinner table, they all hold hands as grace is said.

This seems to me such a charming custom that I want to share it.

Imagine how it must soothe tensions and ensure a peaceful meal!

Bobbs

MY NEEDLEPOINT

DEAR HELOISE:

I am constantly expanding my already extensive work in needlepoint and as a result, find I have great amounts of needlepoint yarn and am fast running out of places to hide it.

I found that large enough baskets were quite expensive. And then I had a brainstorm I'd like to share with others...I bought a coal hod.

For those clever with a paint brush, designs can be painted on the sides. I left the black one as is, but recently saw a beautiful brass coal hod and bought it. It's not only functional but decorative.

Anne-Marie Nilsen

CUTTING REMARKS

DEAR HELOISE:

Living in a mobile home presents a problem as to where to put things and still have them handy, but out of the way.

We have several card tables and no headboards for our Hollywood-style twin and double beds.

So I covered the tables with matching cloth, and set one against the wall behind each single bed — two for the double one. They look real nice as headboards, and yet are available in an instant when friends come for cards.

They are also easily lifted up and put on the bed when doing the floors and baseboards.

Lollypop

ON THE GRILL

DEAR HELOISE:

We barbecue or grill meats a lot over an outdoor pit, using charcoal.

Sometimes the charcoal is not completely burned away, and rather than letting it become a pile of worthless white ashes, as soon as the cooking is completed, we rake the hot coals into a bucket of water.

When the coals are out, we dump the water, let the charcoal drain and dry to be used the next time. Sure saves on charcoal.

Mrs. Harold Haynes

L'IL LOST HAMSTER

DEAR HELOISE:

Has your hamster ever escaped? (No, thank goodness, but read on — this sounds like it would work. — H.)

To get it back: Cut a hole in the bottom of a carton. Invert carton over a fish bowl or large jar. (Hole should be the same size as mouth of jar). Put a tissue over the hole. Put some hamster food on the tissue.

During the night the hamster will climb up (you could build steps out of blocks or make a ramp) and fall into the bowl.

Because of the bowl or jar's slippery sides, the animal cannot get out and you've got it back!

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Sign is missing. 2. Dog's leg is different. 3. Man's arm is repositioned. 4. Hoop is missing. 5. Bow is different. 6. Sweater is different.

PLACE two coins atop the rim of a water glass as illustrated above (figure 1). Challenge a bystander to remove the coins using just one hand. Of course, the coins are not supposed to fall into the glass or drop to the table.

Secret: Poise thumb and forefinger over the coins (figure 2). Now, press each coin down over the outer edge of the glass (3).

Apply pressure to squeeze the coins to the sides of the glass. And, with continued pressure draw the two coins around the glass into your hand (4).

It's a trick that takes some practice.

BULLETIN BOARD

● COIN TEST! You are holding six current U.S. coins. The largest is a half-dollar. You cannot make change for any U.S. coin up to and including a silver dollar. What coins have you?

1. Three. 2. Seven. 3. Nine.

● Riddle-Me-This: If April showers bring May flowers, what do May flowers bring? Give up? How about Pilgrims?
